Sadat-Assad Decision Is Believed Part of Peace Talk Strategy

Special to The New York Times CAIRO, Dec. 21-Egypt and Syria, in an apparent move to strengthen the Arah position for negotiations with Israel next year, announced today that they had decided to form a "united political leadership" and to study the possibility of a future union of the countries.

The announcement, made simultaneously in Cairo and Damascus, followed four days of talks here between Presidents Anwar el-Sadat of Egypt and Hafez al-Assad of Syria.

Egyptian sources said that the two governments hoped that by careful coordination of their policies they could exert increased pressure on Israel to make a settlement with them in Geneva. Girding for 1977 Conference

The primary purpose of the propose union, they suggested, might be to bolster the Arab position at an expected resumption in 1977 of the Middle East peace conference in Geneva, which has been adjourned since December 1973.

According to Egypt's Foreign Minister, Ismail Fahmy, the two Presidents decided that there should be separate Arab delegations to any negotiations in Geneva. But, according to diplomatic sources, the Presidents agreed as well that a single delegation might become necessary.

This apparently would represent Egypt, Syria, Jordan, the Palestine Liberation Organization and perhaps Lebanon. [In Beirut, Arab analysis predicted that Egypt and Syria would next seek to extend their coordination to the P.L.O.]

U.A.R. Model a Possibility Foreign Minister Fahmy said that the form and extent of any union between Egypt and Syria would be worked out by joint committees in the various areas of government and that these would report to the two Presidents, Mr. Fahrny said also that a complete unioo such as

Immediately following the verdict, Judge Bruno L. Leopizzi temporarily refused requests of defense attorneys to allow Mr. Carter and Mr. Artis their freedom pending sentencing on Feh. 2. He said that he would reconsider their applications after receiving probation reports on both men.

The defendants' second trial was ordered by the State Supreme Court earlier this year on the ground that evidence beneficial to the defense had been withheld by the prosecution in the first trial in 1967. Moneyiess People of Beirut $|\mathfrak{Q}|$ Try to Rebuild a Broken Life

By HENRY TANNER

BEIRUT, Lebanon, Dec. 21-Bankers and urban specialists have grandiose visions for the reconstruction of Beirut. Some of them propose to bulldoze the city's old commercial center, which is a heap of rubble now, push the mass of debris into the sea and build a new city center oo the landfill city center oo the landfill.

Newspapers print maps with graceful designs of cloverleaf traffic exchanges and tree-studded recreation areas replacing once-crowded neighborhoods.

But expectations are more modest in the sections of the city where ordinary citizens are trying to pick up the pieces of their shattered lives. Hope is tempered by doubts about the future. is tempered by doubts about the future, by empty pockets and by continued

The crazy-quilt economic and social patierus of Lebanon are reflected in the way the country is seeking a new life.

Walting for the Subsidy

Shopkeepers are waiting with little conviction for the promised Government subsidies to replenish their stock. They have hidden some merchandise in their cellars and in the villages in the mountains. And they borrow from the mountains. And they borrow from brothers and cousins to get more.

A tailor is looking desperately for the clients who ordered the last suits he failed to finish before the war—19 months ago. He has found two out of 10 and says he needs three more to huv material and be back in husiness. Many people talk of emigrating, to joio relatives abroad.

More Lebanese are living abroad than

More Lebanese are living abroad than in Lebanon, and these relatives, rather than the Government, are the source of capital that the average citizen is counting on.

Stolen goods worth millions of dollars are finding their way back into conventional trade channels.

Everyone Is Trading Again

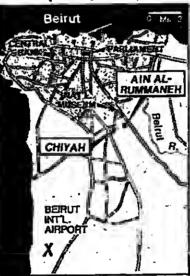

The trading urge of the Lebanese is irrepressible. And nearly everyone seems to be trading again. But so far it is commerce at subsistence level.

Nowhere are the material and emotional obstacles to the common critzen's transition to peacetime living more tangible than on Assaad el Assaad Street, where the first shots of the war were fired. the war were fired.

The street connects the Moslem quarter of Chiyah in the southeastern part of the city with the Christian quarter of Ain al-Rummaneh. Both are crowded modest middle-class suburbs. On April 13 last year, a hus with 29 Palestinians drove down Assaad el-Assaad from the Moslem section. About 200 yards into the Christian neighborhood, in front of a small apartment building that also houses a church, Christian militiamen opened fire on the bus, killing all passengers. The Palestinans said it was murder. The right-wing Christians said that the passengers were armed and had intended to attack. No weapons were found in the bus. The war was on.

Now, on the Moslem side of the old. battle line the first families are moving back into the gutted apertment blocks. Signs of life are sprouting incongruous-ly in the pockmarked rulns: A child peeks through a gaping hole in a wall high above the street. Bedding is aired oo broken balconies. An old man carts rich black earth from a dismantled wartime barricade to an incredibly green little garden behind his flattened wreck of a house.

The first grocer is back on the block but all he has are a few plastic bags of milk, bottled mineral water and some crates of apples and tangerines on the sidewalk.

A paint dealer has moved his pots back into another one-room store across the street. He plainly is the bappiest man around. "Everyone will need paint no matter what," he says.

Abu Ali, who has 10 children, is the only man back in his apartment on the last block of the Moslem quarter, just short of the dividing line.
He is a merchant. His store across the street is a gaping black hole in a collapsed building.

Spent War in Home Village

A Shifte Moslem, he spent most of the war in what he calls "his village" near the Israeli border. The Moslems on Assaad el-Assaad Street almost all are Shiftes from that region. He also worked five months of the war in Saudi Arabia—"trading," he said vaguely. He would like to reopen a store but has no funds. "I am waiting," he says for a Government loan and for help from a brother who is in Haiti.

If nothing turns up by next spring, he will emigrate to Australia to join another brother, he said. Abu Ali's apartment, like all the others in the gutted buildings, is empty. A framed family photograph and two broken sofas and small tables are all that remains. "Who did the looting?" he was asked. His answer was a shrug. There are things that are still too dangerous to know. Helmeted Syrian soldiers are posted at the intersection just beyond the building. Cars driving along Assaad el-Assaad Street swing left or right at the crossroads. None of them drive straight on from the Moslem to the Christian quarter or back.

Because the street crossed the battle line at a right angle, it was a shooting gallery for heavy artillery and snipers. No one could move on it.

A Moslem returning to the Chiyah quarter of Beirut unloads his belongings outside a shelled building.

Inside the buildings, therefore on the lower floors, every smgle wall has a hole through which fighters and civilians, moved backward and forward parallel to the street through living rooms, bedrooms kitchens and stair-

The holes are jagged and often resemble a human figure with broad shoulders and a bead, as if a man had burst through the wall.

Three hundred yards down the street, in Christian Ain al-Rummaneh, the walls have similar holes. And the human problems are similar, except that fewer people left during the war and more have returned because the political and religious organizations in the neighborhood are strong and active. The schools are open again.

Here too, the first shop that opened was a grocer's. The grocer, who supported his family during the war by driving his small car as a cab in other, safer Christian neighborhoods, said that he had borrowed $300 from a that he had borrowed $300 from a cousin to put the first stocks on his

Last week he painted his store. Did he get his paint from his neighbor, the Moslem paint merchant down the street, he is asked. "Oh, no," is his answer, "I wouldn't go over there. And we don't want them over here."

A bearded young man working at a butcher's bench said that his real calling was that of station chief in the national Postal Service. He hopes to return to his job the first of January. But his salary was paid all through the war, he said, adding that he was a fighter in the Phalangist militia force, the principal right-wing military organization.

Across the street, an older man was hammering shelves into place in anoth-er one-room shop. He is waiting to see how things turn out. If the peace is still holding in January, he said, he will start repairing radio and TV sets again after having been closed for 19 months.

How did he feed his family during the fighting, he was asked. "I was a sergeant in the French army before independence, and they never missed a payment of my pension," he answered. Over on the Mostem section of the street, a middle-aged man in overalls, who said he employed 250 workers before the war, was trying to coax an ancient cement mixer into action.

New Floors Are Added

In a typical feature of Lebanese reconstruction techniques he was not repairing the existing apartment but adding new floors on top of two guited and uninhabitable buildings.

Zoning regulations have been ignored for the last two years and landlords are now building quickly what they fear they will not be allowed to build in a few months.

They are repairing existing apartments because almost no one in Lebanon is paying rent-not the regular tenants and certainly not the tens of thousands of squatters who live in The Government has issued a declaration saying that all structures built without permission will be torn down. But out near the airport, squatters driven from the city's slums during the fighting have built hundreds of onestory houses on land that does not belong to them. They are not worried about the Government's threat. The Government has not yet been able to remove scores of similar houses built nearby by earlier squatters during the seven-month period of civil strife in

Slaying of 27 Black Workers Angers Rhodesians

SALISBURY, Rhodesia, Dec. 21 (Reu-ters)—White Rhodesians reacted with shock and anger today to the reports that 27 black workers had been machinegunned and hayoneted to death by black guerrillas on a tea estata near the lozambique border.

A Rhodesian military spokesman re-jected "with contempt" charges reported from Maputo, the capital of Mozambique, that the killings, which occurred on Sim-day, had been the work of the Selous Scouts, an anti-insurgency unit of the Rhodesian Army.

"The world press was taken to the scene of the massacre and spoke to survivors who were in no doubt as to who committed this outrage," the spokesman said. "If the world press is not convinced then there is nothing alse we can do.

Several television crews from overseas and a party of local reporters visited the eastern border town of Melsetter yesterday to see the bodies and to interview some of the less seriously wounded survi

The Rev. Arthur Lewis, a white priest who went to the scene, said today: "This was an act of sickening, cold-blooded barwas an act of sickening, conditioned har-harity which would be unbelievable if one had not seen the shot and hayoneted bodies of the terrorists' victims."

Government officials said yesterday that about 30 guerrillas entered the tea plantation on Sunday and took about 80

blacks from their huts. The men were separated from the women and children and were lined up and shot. The guerrillas then walked among the bodies bayoneting any men who still showed signs of life, the officials said.

Eleven meo escaped death by crawling under the bodies of others. Many of them are hospitalized with serious injuries.

Egypt's decision 15 mooths ago to sign the secood agreement with Israel without any parallel accord between Syria and Israel, brought bitter attacks on the Egyptians from Damascus, and the Egyptians attacked the Syrians for their intervention.

But relations between Egypt and Syria improved in the last few mooths as Arabs agreed at two conferences on moves to end the Lebanese eivil war with Syrian deminating a peacekeeping force.

end the Lebanese ervit war with Syrian forces dominating a peacekeeping force.

Nothing was said tonight about Lebanon in the statement read by Foreign Minister Fahmy. Diplomatic sources said that the issue of confiscating heavy weapons in the hands of the former combatants in the civil war there had been left for the Lebanese President to decide. Egypt has apparently agreed not to inter-fere, diplomatic sources said. Mr. Fahmy said the announcement today would "dissipate the hallucinations of all who thought that relations between Egypt and Syria were cut forever."

"We may differ on the surface but basically we are one nation," he added.

He said that the planned joint committees would study the process of unification in such areas as constitutional prob-dan about a merger.

A loose federation between Egypt, Syria and Libya already exists as the Federation of Arab Republics. Organized in 1971, it has in recent years been "dormant," as Mr. Fahmy described it, Asked whether Libya would be invited to join the new union, Mr. Fahmy replied curtly that the question should be addressed to Libya, with which Egypt has bad relations.

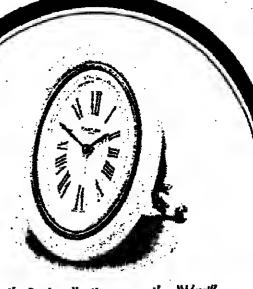

Speaking of the 1958 union of Egypt and Syria, Mr. Fahmy said it ended in three years because it had been formed hastily. "Now we are moving cantiously to form a firm basis," he said. He did not give the second of the second in the second i any timetable for the accomplishment

"The fire spread awfully fast," a fire department spokesman said.

Flames quickly enguifed the top story of the 20-unit building in the McArthur Park section, about a mile from the civic center, forcing residents to the windows to escape the blaze.

About seven persons were rescued by firemen on ladders, but many were forced to jump about 16 feet to the ground. Seventy firemen had the blaze under control in about 30 mioutes. Damage to the structure, which houses an estimated 80 to 100 residents, was estimated at $50,000.

The injured included an 18-year-old man with major burns, a 50-year-old woman in critical conditon, and two fire men, who suffered smoke inhalation.

CHARLESTON, W. Va., Dec. 21—Arnold R. Miller today announced formally that he would seek re-election to the presidency of the troubled United Mine Workers union and introduced the slate of candidates that will run with him.

Mr. Miller's slate is made up of men relatively unknown in the 277,000-member union with the exception of his vice-presidential candidate, Sam Church, who supported the union's former president, W.A. Boyle, in the 1969 and 1972 union elections. Mr. Miller defeated Mr. Boyle in the last election.

Mr. Church, a 40-year-old coal miner from southwestern Virginia, is acting as Mr. Miller's administrativa assistant. He was arrested recently in the union's Workers' union today. The democratic process is working."

Mr. Church and Miller today announced formally years, is almost unknown in the union years, is almost unknown in the union as is Mr. Miller's candidate for vice president. Mr. Miller's candidate for vice president for pension affairs, James Blair. Mr. Blair, a 68-year-old retired surface miner, is from the same Kentucky union district as Mr. Miller's and procession affairs, James Blair. Mr. Blair, a 68-year-old retired surface miner, is from the same Kentucky union district as Mr. Miller's protection of his vice-president, who has been criticized recently for his inability to get along with the union's elected officials and for dismissing staff members without apparent reason, said at today's news here: "I think we can say today that the U.M.W. is the most democratic labor organization in the workers' union today. The democratic process is working."

process is working."

Mr. Church said, "Mr. Miller and I weren't together in the last campaign, but we're together now. We see eye-to-eye on nearly every issue. A lot of fellows forget that President Miller is the boss. I will carry out his orders."

was critical of Mr. Miller's travel expenses. Some union insiders felt that Mr. Miller gave tacit approval to the attack because he thought Mr. Bank had released information for the article. Mr. Church maintains that Mr. Bank provoked him by making an insulting personal remark about Mr. Miller. The case will be tried in Washington in April.

Mr. Miller chose 30-year-old Bill Esselstyn from the late Joseph A. Yablonski's union district in Pennsylvania to run with him for secretary-treasurer. Mr. Yablonski, his wife and his daughter were murdered in their home. He had conducted a reform candidacy against Mr. Boyle, who was convicted for his part in ordering the financing of the 1969 slayings.

Moves at International Parleys in'76 Seen as Threatening Free Press

By DEIRDRE CARMODY

An independent study group warned yesterday of the danger of an increasing trend toward manipulation of the news media by governments as a tool to stimulate economic development.

Freedom House, a nongovernmental organization that monitors liberties around the world, said in its annual report that resolutions had been adopted at various international conferences that condoned practices that could lead to governmental control of the news media in some countries.

The report said that these resolutions were among the most potentially serious blows to world freedom during the last year.

"It is still too early to know whether 1976 was the year in which a combination of crucial events will lead, in many parts of the world, to shackling of the free press and harrassment of international news agencies," Leonard R. Sussman, executive director of Freedom House, says in the annual report's leading article, entitled "A Faterul Year for the News

By SETH S. KING

CHICAGO, Dec. 21-One day after Richard J. Daley's death, Chicagoans were trying to convince themselves that he was no longer their Mayor.

But Illinois politicians knew he was gone and the maneuvering over a successor began last night, within hours after Mr. Daley suffered a heart attack and

Wilson Frost, president pro tem of the City Council, asserted that the confusing law oo succession made him the Acting Mayor. But Kenneth Sain, the appointed Deputy Mayor, said he was the official empowered to carry out the day-to-day functions of city government.

After a morning meeting of the two with other councilmen and party leaders, it was decided that the City Council congress. In virtually all of the reports, the conclusion was that there was a need for fighter financial disclosure requirements for the employees. The accounting ments for the employees: The accounting frederal law and a presidential executive order, prohibits an employee of an agency order, prohibits an employee of an agency to fill the two remaining years of Mr. Daley's sixth term.

Duties Are Divided

In the meantime, Mr. Frost, a black, will assume the mayor's legislative duties by presiding over the City Council, and Mr. Sain will continue to handle the administraive duties.

All 48 City Council seats are held by Democrats, with only six members con-sidered independents. The rest are loyal elements of the Cook County Democrati Central Committee, which Mayor Daley led and dominated for 20 years.

In the infighting that is expected in the next seven days, Alderman Michael A. Bilandic, chairman of the council's finance committee and a close friend of Mr. Daley, was considered to be the favorite to win the interim appointment. This speculation was based on the assumption that the central committee, which controls the aldermen, would be able to agree on a temporary mayor who would step aside this spring for a candi-date they could agree on.

But there are 13 black aldermen, all of whom are expected to support Mr. Frost for the mayoral appointment. If he could join forces with Alderman Edward R. Commission officials said that they were reductant to use a "literal interpretation" of the disclosure leaves and has the television and cable television industries and has its primary base of operations here in Washington.

After a meeting with Alderman Edward central committee member, who is thought to control seven or eight council votes, the split could be wide enough to bring in Mr. Frost.

"If at any time, in my opinion, some-one's being cut out, you'll hear me scream," he told reporters.

No Consensus on Winner Aside from the belief that the struggle over the permanent candidate will be long and bitter, there was no consensus

But the central committee's nominee, whoever he is, will probably face a dif-ficult primary. Former Aldenman William Singer, a vigorous young independent who ran a respectable race against Mr. Daley in the 1975 spring primary, was said to be considering trying again this

On the statewide political scene, Mr. Daley's death leaves tha incoming Secretary of State, Alan Dixon, clearly the most powerful Democrat in office.

Mr. Daley's influence in the Democratic controlled legislature was already slip-ping as downstate resentment against Chicago and its aging Mayor increased. And whoever ends up as Mayor Daley's successor will face all the familiar urban problems with a city administration that has seldom made any major decisions. During the earlier part of Mr. Daley's 2I-year reign, he made most of them and reasonably sound financial health. Mr. Daley had proposed a 1977 city budget of $1.2 billion, up only slightly from this year and in balance from increasing revelopment. oues he expected from current tax rates and Federal aid.

age of 23, shortly after receiving his doctorate in physics from Columbia Uniersity he was recruited by the Atomic Energy Commission to help design weapons, and became a pro-tege of Dr. Edward Teller, the developer of the hyrogen bomb, at the Liver-more Laboratory in California. He was guided into various advis-ory jobs for the Government, including membership on the President's science advisory committee. Having successfully passed that advisory apprenticeship, he was made director of research and engineering at the Pentagon, the third-ranking job there, and then moved laterally into the more prestigious but less powerful joh as Secretary of the

. For the past seven years, he has gained administrative training as Presi-dent of the California Institute of Technology. Then today, President-elect Carter named Dr. Brown, now 49, as Secretary of Defense, the first scientist to fill the top job at the Pentagon.

Understands Technology

His training has equipped Dr. Brown, better than any of his predecessors, to understand the technological complexities of modern warfate; but his background troubles some members of ... Congress and former associates in the Pentagon, as they contemplate his direction of a defense program that is driven by many more factors than just the design and cost of modern weap-

"His approach, going back to his days at Livermore, is that technology is everything," observed a former Pentagon colleague. "He believes that tech-nology can solve anything, with little regard as to whether the solution can be used by the soldier in the field."

It was Dr. Brown, for example, who conceived the idea of developing the TFX plane, which proved to be an embarrassing project to the Defense Department during the regime of Secretary Robert S. McNamara. The concept was that the Air Force and Navy should consolidate on construction of a fighter-bomber, but so many incom-patible requirements were built into the plane that the project crashed into a barrier of Navy and Congressional re-

some reservations about the $24 billion project, it is expected that Dr. Brown will recommend that it be approved. In a May 20 letter to Senator William Proximite, Dr. Brown said that he be-lieved the Defense Deapriment "has the best of the argument" over whether to produce the bomber.

As one of Mr. McNamara's "whiz kids," as they were known somewhat disparagingly on Capitol Hill, Dr. Brown joined in the move more than a decade ago to kill the B-70 bomber, the predecessor of the B-1. Later, as Secretary of the Air Force, he supported development of a bomber that

At the same time, however, Dr. Brown was privately critical of some of the arguments advanced by the Air Force staff for huilding a new bomber. He once told an Air Force official that the Air Force staff was advancing the "silly argument" that the United States must build a new strategic bomber because the Soviets were building one. "We are not proposing to send out bombers to fight bombers," he com-mented in dismissing the staff argu-

Aside from the B-1 issue, Dr. Brown's most immediate impact on defense issues may be in belping Mr. Carter in his stated goal of hreaking the impasse on strategic arms limitations with the Soviet Union.

Welcomed by Arms Community The selection of Dr. brown was wel-comed by leaders in the arms control community, who believe that the new Secretary of Defense, despite his hias toward weapons technology, will be more amenable to a strategic arms agreement with the Soviet Union than his two predecessors, James R. Schlesinger and Donald H. Rumafeld.

In an article in Foreign Affairs in 1969, written shortly after he left the Pentagon, Dr. Brown said he believed that "a properly designed agreement to limit strategic forces can better insure the security of the United States and the Soviet Union." Mr. Schlesinger had often expressed the same opinion but as a former arms control negotiator who worked with both officials put it: Harold can be expected to raise less ifs, ands and huts than Jim Schlesing-

As Secretary of the Air Force, he supported the bombing of North Vietnam in the early stages of that war. When Mr. McNamara asked the service secretaries whether further constraints should be placed on the bombing, Dr. Brown reportedly was the only one who opposed additional constraints.

When Dr. Brown, at age 33, came to the Pentagon to direct the multibil-lion-dollar defense research program, he struck his colleagues as a shy, some-what awkward man; but during his eight years there, he seemed to out-grow his shyness and acquired a selfconfidence that some said verged on arrogance. After some initial difficulties, he also proved adept in handling Congressional committees. "He turned into a smoothy in dealing with us," one committee staff executive ob-

Freddie Ray Marshall

By DAVID E. ROSENBAUM

WASHINGTON, Dec. 21-Last year, George Meany, president of the A.F.L.-C.I.O., invited F. Ray Marshall, a labor economist at the University of Texas, to Washington to meet Aleksandr I. Solzhenitsyn, the dissident Soviet author. In introducing Pro-fessor Marshall to Mr. Solzhenitsyn, Mr. Meany said, "I want you to meet one of the few American professors who understands the working people." That, in capsule, is Mr. Marshall's reputation in labor, business and academic circles, and it is a reputation that makes him an acceptable choice as Secretary of Labor to a variety of interests.

Mr. Meany would have preferred that John T. Dunlop, the former Secretary, be nominated by President-elect Carter, but he approved of the choice of Mr. Marshall and described him today as "a labor economist whose views are liberal, informed and sensible.

On the other hand, representatives of women and blacks, who vigorously opposed Mr. Dunlop because he was unwilling to stress affirmative action hiring and promotion programs, also endorsed Mr. Marshall. His principal academic interest over the years has involved expansion of employment opportunities for women and members of minority groups, and he has written an impressive number of books and articles on the subject. He has also directed several programs toward that end. Background in Poverty

Mr. Marshall, according to his colleagues in Austin, Tex, hes an abiding interest in improving the lot of the disadvantaged—male and female, hlack and white—and especially those from rural areas. It is an interest, his friends say, that derives from his own background in powerty.

He received a master's degree from Louisiana State University and a doctorate in economics from the Universi-ty of California at Berkeley under a grant from the Rockefeller Foundation. The grant came from a program designed to develop college teachers from the rural South, and Mr. Marshall has told colleagues that he felt a moral obligation to remain in the South, despite job offers from prestigious universities in the North After obtaining his Ph.D., Mr. Marshall taught at the University of Mississippi and Louisiana University before going to the University of Texas in 1962 as a full professor at the age of 34. During the late 1950's and early '60's, according to one man who knew him, Mr. Marshall was "an outspoken champion of desegregation when that was not a popular position to take in Southern universities."

In 1967, he went to the University of Kentucky to become chairman of the economics department, but two years later he was hired back by the University of Texas at what a senior professor cells "an enormously attrac-tive salary, much more than we usually pay a full professor."

Mr. Marshall served briefly as department chairman at the University of Texas, but, according to several of his colleagues, ha did not like the administrative responsibility and was not particularly good at it. "It doesn't mean that he's not a good administrator," said Prof. Stephen L. McDonald, who served later as depart-ment chairman. "It's just that he didn't went to administer that job."

Prefers Work Over Partying Another colleague, Prof. Vernon M. Briggs Jr., said that one of Mr. Marshall's problems as chairman was that he did not enjoy tha social duties that went with the job. "He likes to work a lot more than he likes to party," Mr. Briggs said of his friend.

Indeed, neither Pat, his wife of 30 years, nor his friends could think of any hobby or sport that Mr. Marshall liked. His wife did note that he enjoyed their small country place outside Austin, where they and their five children, ranging in age from 13 through 18, go on weekends.

Professor McDonald described Mr. Marshall as "extremely productive" as an academic, and that appears to be the case.

Employment of Blacks Stressed

Over the last decade, Mr. Marshall has written about a book a year, many of them about the employment of blacks. He has been instrumental in encouraging blacks to enter apprenticeship programs for skilled trades and in persuading unions to take blacks into such programs. Recently, he has developed programs to train women for

In the last few days, Mr. Marshall discussed with his colleagues his views of government and of the duties of the Labor Secretary. They got the impression that he would be an active secretry and would favor spending Federal money to create jobs programs. He has been working, his friends said, to develop new approaches to make public service jobs programs more effective

Patricia Roberts Harris

By LINDA CHARLTON

WASHINGTON, Dec. 21 — "A mind like a steel trap," says one old friend of Patricia Roberts Harris, named today by President-elect Carter to be Secretary of Housing and Urban Develop-ment in his Cabinet. Warm and motherly" were the words used by someone else to describe her. The 52-year-old lawyer, politician and sometime diplomat is the second woman and the first black named to Mr. Carter's Cabinet. Throughout her career, what one friend described as her "duality"—an unusual and generally effective mix of toughness, sharp mind and charm—has been her trade-

Less than a month after she became dean of Howard University Law School in 1969, Mrs. Harris quit rather than submit to the demands of the students for a more important role in running the school. The final decisions must be made by people who have a long-range commitment to the institution," said Mrs. Harris.

During the same disruption at Howard, Mrs. Harris encountered a black student who was carrying a sign calling for her resignation and the appointment of a male replacement. "I told him I didn't stop being the white man's nigger to become a black man's nigger," Mrs. Harris recalled later.

Considers Post Important

Today, at the news conference in Plains, Ga., at which her selection was announced. Mrs. Harris said she was "honored and pleased," and friends say that she does consider the Cabinet post an important one—or she would not have taken it. Joining the Carter ad-ministration will mean leaving the large Washington law firm in which she is a partner, a well-paid specialist in litigation. "There are a number [of posts] she would have turned down," said one friend, indicating that Mrs. Harris is "interested in heing her own boss" and "very serious about any responsibility she undertakes." There have been many, and they have been varied, which suits a woman who once said that she had decided to become a lawyer because the law is "the last refuge of the generalist." She has been a delegate to the United Nations General Assembly; Ambassador to Lux-embourg; a board member of several major corporations from Chase Man-hattan Bank to Scott Paper company; the victor in one of the tempestuous internal battles in the Democratic Party in 1972, and a professor of law.

She was born in Mattoon, III., on May 31, 1924, the daughter of a Pull-man waiter and a schoolteacher. She was graduated summa cum laude from Howard in 1945, and returned to the Chicago area to serve as program direc-tor of the Young Women's Christian More than 10 years after leaving col-

A $7 BILLION SAVING ON NAVY SUGGESTED

Congressional Budget Office Urges Stress on Control of Sea Lanes Not Striking at Soviet Union

> By JOHN W. FINNEY Special to The New York Times

WASHINGTON, Dec. 21-The Congre sional Budget Office suggested today that more than $7 billion could be saved in the defense budget over the next five years if the Navy shifted its emphasis to controlling the sea lanes rather than striking at the Soviet Union

The suggestion was contained in the first of a series of "issue papers" that the Congressional Budget Office will issue in the next few weeks analyzing alternatives for the defense budget.

The study on naval forces presents onc of the basic issues that will confront the Carter administration and Congress as they grapple with a proposed $123 billion defense budget inherited from the Ford Administration.

Administration.

At a news conference today in Plains, Ga., President-elect Carter reiterated his pledge to cut the defense budget by $5 billion to $7 billion. Among his advisers, however, there is a growing belief that Mr. Carter will not be able to achieve such a reduction unless he is willing to make some basic changes in the missions of the military services, such as the fuof the military services, such as the future role of the Navy.

Basic Issue Defined

On the naval role, the study said, "The fundamental issue is whether the United States wishes to buy naval forces de-signed to approach and attack the Soviet Union and its allies in the face of heavy defenses, or whether we wish instead to concentrate effort on insuring that we can keep the sea lanes open against Sovi-

By shifting to a "sea control" force, it said, it should be possible to save at least $7 billion over the next five years through elimination of such expensive ships as nuclear-powered carriers and strike cruisers proposed by the Navy. The funds saved, it said, could be used to build up the fleet through the purchase of less expensive antisubmarine ships.

"We have no black members and no Jews that I know of, though I've never checked," Charles L. Gowen, the club president, said. "I know we have an Egyptian, but I would imagine there are construction of additional ships aimed at a president of a president o projection of power against the Soviet

The study questioned whether the ship building program proposed by the Admin-istration would provide an adequate force the Soviet Union. Beyond that, however, it questioned whether the Navy's plan for using its carrier task forces to strike at the Soviet Union was a feasible, militarily necessary concept.

Carrier task forces attempting to approach the Soviet Union, it said, "would increasingly become absorbed in self-defense as they came within range of Soviet land-based air forces." Furthermore, it said, "attack of such Soviet targets as can be reached from the sea would not be likely to affect the outcome of the war in Central Europe significantly.

Rubin Carter and Artis Convicted | Former Nixon Aides Testify at Ex-Policeman's Tax Trial in Brookly

By MAX IL SEIGEL

In what appeared to be a capsule replay of the Watergate hearings, members of former President Nixon's White House staff turned up in United States District Court in Brookyn yesterday to testify in the tax violation trial of Anthony T. Ulas-cewicz, the retired New York City police officer who worked as a confidential invesatigator for the former President.

Herbert W. Kalmbach, who served as personal counsel to President Nixon from March 1969 to the end of February 1974 and who was the first witness for the prosecution, testified that he had arranged to pay Mr. Ulascewicz $20,000 in 1971 and $25,000 in 1972 in salary and expenses through John J. Caulfield, a White House aide. But Mr. Kalmbach said he did not know whether the private investigator ever received the money. Two other Watergate figures-John D.

Enrichman, former White House chief of staff, and John W. Dean 3d., former White House counsel, were also able to shed little light on the payments to Mr. come to the attention of the Watergate

"We didn't evan take our coats off," he said.

Described as 'Private Nature'

"The work we wanted him doing." Mr. Ehrlichman added, "was of a private nature. The President wanted a piece of information checked into, and it was not appropriate for a Government employee to do so, so he passed it along to me and I passed it along to John Caulfield. Caufield recommended Mr. Ulascewicz.

He was paid out of private funds."

Mr. Dean testified that he had met Mr.

The LR.S. investigator, Leo Libowitz, added that Mr. Ulascewicz told him that after getting the $25,000 in 1972 he planned to report the total of $45,000 in income on his 1972 return. It was bound to happen, they say.

When the plent boom hit, many well-meaning people rushed off to buy little green pets without stopping to consider whether they had the proper environment or the proper tempera-ment to care for them. Naturally, some didn't. "They always want something they can't have," said Henry Snyder, owner of Plants West. "They say, I want that,' and point to a full-light thing but, of course, they live on an air chaft. And this leads to disillusionment."

Mr. Jarecki believes some of these reluctant gardeners are finally throwing in the trowel. "They feel the boom is over and the pressure to live with plants is off them," he said. "At least they're being realistic."

The pressure to decorate with plants is also off. "The jungle look is out among top designers, definitely," said Paige Rense. "With all the trees and plants you needed a machete to cut your way across a

What is out is the jungle look.
Win Welpeo, a producer of television commercials, prefers the look of his East Side living room without mass of plants along the window seat. He also prefers the look of his electric bills.

Like many city gardeners, Mr. Welpen had to leave the overhead lights on 12 hours a day to keep his plants happy. Theo, too, there was the ninsance of getting someone to water them whenever he went out of town.

Besides that he said, "I have verti-cal blinds that close in front of the area and I really found I preferred looking at the blinds to looking at the plants." All of which recently prompted Mr. Welpen to distribute his greens among his maid, an elevator man and a couple of friends. "I don't miss them at all," he mused. "I'm really delighted not to have Actually, it was the ex-girlfriend who was flawed, or so it now seems to Mr. Wilson. "We had a party one night and she hid all the hrown plants in the closet," he recalled. "That depressed me. She moved out

A ourse named Lynn Cannon was once so involved with plants that she took to propagating them. Her home in Darien, Conn., used to overflow with impatiens, seedlings and things,

"I don't know how many plants I had," she said with a sigh. "It bores me to remember. I did love them and I nurtured them hut, oh dear, they became such a burden."

If serious gardeners like Mrs. Can-non are now bored by plants, does this mean the boom is over? Not necessarily. Her grown children have inherited her taleot and most of her plants as well.

The Sybaritic Scents of Candles That Make Breathing a Pleasure

BY ENID NEMY

There are a lot of unnecessary things in life and perfumed candles are among them. But they are also, for the most part, too small a sybaritic pleasure to be sinful.

The scent of a perfumed candle drifting through a room has long been one of the symbols of sophisticated sociated it with large, luxurious apartments full of servants and what used to be known as the three F's — fine

No longer. Perfumed candles come in such a variety of shapes, in such a variety of scents, and at such a variety of prices, that there is at least one around that would be suitable for any living style.

The most prestigious scented candle is still Rigaud, which was also one of the first on the market, and one of the most expensive. The Rigard candle is handmade and makes no attempt to look like anything other than what

Long-Burning Device

It is in a clear glass container with a silver-metal holder and top, and the large $35 size is said to burn for 50 hours. Most of the Rigaud candles one sees anywhere are green because, for some reason, it is the one that has achieved status. It may also be that more people like a woodsy scent than the blend of fresh flowers, which is the other choice. Both the woodsy "Cypres" and the flowery "Cythere" also come in $25 refills and smaller sizes down to $10.

The widest choice—almost an embarrassment—is offered by Estee Lauder. Mrs. Lauder, who is almost as well known for her imagnative packaging as she is for her products, has used a classic blue and white design for her Youth Dew candles.

The porcelains, in varying shapes de-pending on the size of the candles, are reusable as bathroom containers, din-ing room china, or as little boxes that one sees scattered around with such abandon these days.

Mrs. Lauder's Estée fragrance comes in a crystal sugar bucket, trimmed in silver and Aliage, a less sophisticated scent, is in crockery pots. The prices go from about $7.50 to $20.

Highest Price Is $7.50

Crystal sugar buckets, trimmed in gold, are favored by Revion, who have put a candle scented with Intimate fragrance in one, and a Moon Drops scented candle in another. The Jontue scented candle comes in a vellow-bowed white porcelain cache-pot and none of the three will break the bank. The highest price is $7.50.

The containers for the Elizabeth Arden scented candles are among the most delicate around, white porcelain scattered with pastel posies. A little pot with its own lid is particularly versatile—for herbs, spices, teas and bits and pieces long after the candle has burned down. The price is $8.50.

One of the greatest selections of scents is put out by Max Factor. There's an Aquarius trio, in egg, pear or apple shape, at $4.95 each, a Geminesse fragrance in a reusabla etched crystal vase at $12.50, and a Toujours Moi or Fame candle in a ceramic cootainer at

A pair of Halston perfumed candles, at $30, come in crystal dishes, with are designed by Elsa Peretti and can be used later as ash trays or can be refilled with candles for $14.50 a pair.

Brigitte Totschnig Habersatter on her way to victory in a World Cup downhill race in Zell am See, Austria

Mrs. Habersatter Posts 2d Ski Victory

ZELL AM SEE, Austria, Dec. 21 (UPI) Brigitte Totschnig Habersatter of Austria, taking advantage of a spill by Annemarie Proell Moser, captured her second downhill ski race in 24 hours

Mrs. Habersatter, the 1976 Olympic downhill silver medal winner, was timed in 1 minute 30.51 seconds in beating a teammate, Nicula Spiess, and Marie-Therese Nadig of Switzerland, who tied for second place in 1:31.95.

Mrs. Moser, going all out to regain her position as Austria's "downhill queen," took a heavy spill near the end of the race.

Mrs. Moser, who won the season's opening downhill race in Italy, and came in second here ysterday, said, "I lost control in one of the sharp bends shortly before the finish because "I was going too fast."
It was the first time that Mrs. Moser, who came back this season after an 18-month retirement, fell in a World Cup downhill race.

- Cindy Nelson of Lutsen, Minn., was the hest nnn-European racer, taking a remarkable fourth place in 1:32.01.

The race, held on a 2,320-meter track with a drop of 630 meters, was marked by several other spills. The race was the last women's Wurld Cup event this yar. The circuit will resume Jan. 3 at Oberstaufen, West Germany. The United States women returned home for a vacation.

Harris, Bleier Status Still Doubtful

PITTSBURGH, Dec. 21 (AP)—Will Franco Harris and Rockey Bleier, both still listed as "questionable," he ready to play for the Pittsburgh Steelers against the Oakland Raiders for the American Football Conference title in Oakland Sunday?

"I have no way of knowing," Chuck

X-rays of Harris's ribs showed no fracture. "If his ribs were hroken, we couldn't play him at all; and whether we can or not, I don't know yet," said

Bleier was walking with a cane, but his limp had eased. Oakiand's coach, John Madden, took a different view. "I'm sure they'll be okay hy the time we play," he said

by phone from Oakland.

If Harris and Bleier can't play, they will likely be replaced by John Fuqua and Reggie Harrison. Fuque sustained a bruised call against Baltimore, but said: "I'll take care of my body and be ready." Meanwhile. Terry Bradshaw. the Steeler quarterback, said his team had the "away-field" advantage. "There's nothing we like better than going against a team that's hiting at the bit, with the crowd hollering ob-scene things et you," he said.

"Our team reacts to the crowd noise, whether it's for or against us. Our history shows it."

UNIONDALE, L. L. Dec. 21—"Bill-El" Bill-El Bill-El shouted most of the 14,-985 fans, the largest crowd to see a hockey game in Nassau Coliseum history. That was for the 3-0 shutout Billy Smith posted against the Boston

Bruins tonight.

"Ed-DEE! Ed-DEE!" yelled the same crowd near the end of the same after Ed Westfall, the New York Islander captain, capped the victory with a short-handed goal and his second score of the night J. P. Parise got the other

No one shouted "Islanders," but someone should have because the triimph put the New Yorkers back into first place in the National Hockey League's Patrick Division, a point ahead of the Philadelphia Flyers.

"Yes, that was a big game," said Coach Al Arbour, "and a very big 2 points. Bouncing back like that was amportant Our penalty-killing and goal-tending that's what did it. Smitty made some big saves, and then West-fall gets that insurance goal"

In beating the Brusis and Gerra Cheevers, their goalle, the Islanders did something they heard been able to do since March 15, 1975. In winning a game at the Coliseum, Smitty did something he hadn't done since last Nov. 6.

"Ahh, it didn't seem tough," asserted

Smitty, who gained his first shutout of the season. "It was just a great team effort, that's all." Still, he survived 30

though as long as we win.
Both goaltenders represented a diver sion from the pettern their clabs had been following recently. Cheevers and Gilles Gilbert had been alternated in goal faithfully by Coach Don Cherry intil tonight. Cherry no doubt was in-fluenced by Cheevers's fine work against Pittsburgh in his previous outing, which Boston won, 6-3.

Smitty, of course, had become a victim of "Coliseum syndrome," or abuse from his own fans. On Nov. 25 against Detroit, Smitty gave up some easy goals and was lifted by Arbouc in favor of Resch. Part of the reason was the crowd taunting Smith with cries of "Chical" Another part was a lack of good defense from his Islander suddies.

But with Chico making his share of errors here against the Buffalo Sabres last Saturday night, Arbour felt it was time to give Smitty a return to duty in a home contest.

J. P. Parise provided Smitty with a 1-0 lead at 10 minutes 36 seconds of the first period when he took advan-tage of a "rebound" that found its way behind Cheevers, who was out of the crease. Parise skated behind the goalie and pushed the puck into the cage.

The original shot had come from Bob

Nystrom, who saw the puck trickle through Cheevers's pads, though not far enough to cross the goal line. Pat Price also got an assist on the play. Goalies Draw Penalties .

King's Boxing Course: A No-Star Cast at Sea

Don King, who elevated the back rooms of boxing promotion to the 67th floor of 30 Rockefeller Center, announced yesterday his immediate plans to keep the sport affoat in the days after Muhammad Ali.

From the plush offices of his $60,000a-year suite King announced that "the first United States boxing championships" would get under way with quar-terfinel fights in six weight divisions aboard the U.S.S. And that's only for the quarterfinal

King, who promoted the first Ali-Foreman match in Zaire, has first option on the return, provided he can raise between $13 million and $15 million by early March, "I can see $5 milfion right now," King said, "and I'm meeting the guy tomorrow who can-close the whole deal off."

He said he would like to see the fight in America and mentioned "Sonny Werblin's stadium" as his personal choice. King said he would meet with Werblin later this week about the avail-ability of Giants Stadium in East Rutherford, N. J. Pistons Routed as Forward Gets 34 in 3 Periods

By SAM GOLDAPER

With just under two minutes remain ing in the third quarter last night and the Knicks ahead by 32 points, Spencer Haywood left the game to an ovation from the Madison Square Garden

Haywood, in all of his offensive splendor, had done his damage. He had made all 10 shots from the field and scored 34 points, 15 in a first quarter that led to the 133-103 rout of the De-

The Knicks now have a 15-14 won lost record and are unbeaten in the first three games of the Bob McAdoo Era. But Haywood appears to be enjoying the resurgence the most with a total of 97 points.

New Role for Monroe

Tha Knicks, in scoring more than 100 points in three quarter for the sec-ond time in the last three games; played brilliantly s they ended the Pis-tons' four-game winning strek. They ran the Pistons off the court, controlled the boards and reverted to their helping offense that showed up in the assist column (30).

The addition of McAdoo has been a big boost for Haywood and has given Earl Monroe a new role, that of a passer. Haywood has always had a knack to be where the ball is, but with the Knicks playing more of a wide open game, his offensive stock has surged.

"We're getting the ball out, and we're playing my kind of game now," said Haywood. "McAdoo has opened things up for us and I can go inside more.
Before, I was playing a more sterotyped game, sometimes restraining my-self and afraid to do something for roe's new role. Earl is sacrificing him-self as a scorer to become a passer. He's not taking many shots, instead he's in there to make sure everything

Heywood also said that the doctor's assurances that he did not need knee surgery had helped him psychologically. I now go in for a dunk shot, or make a move, and there is no fear of my knea collapsing. It's made a big difference." Monroe, the Knicks' leading scorer in almost every game of their darker days earlier in the season, when he often had to use his one-on-one magic, scored 16 points and had seven assists. "I figured someone had to sacrifice himself on a team with so many shoot-ers," said Mouroe. "It doesn't make any difference to me what role I play as loog as we are winning. I'm still a scorer, but it's more important that we keep things together now."

Frazier Talkative Again

The rebirth of the Knicks has done wonders for Walt Frazier, too. The Knick captain, who had started the season dressing io the adjoining Ranger locker room and sometimes telling re-porters, "Gentlemen, I'm not talking jo-night," has returned to the Knick dressing room, glad to hold court again.
Last night, after he had scored 17 points in 30 minutes of playing time, be greeted interviewers with:

"The pack is back. We're playing inspired ball and we think we have a great team. I made three steals tonight I'm again getting a chance to cheat on defense. We're swiping at balls and we're now ready to pay some people

The Legend Himself Is Back

a photograph of two broad smiles. One set of teeth belongs to Jimmy Carter, a former peanut farmer from Georgia, tha office to Don King, a former numbers operator from Ohio. It is a big, bold shot inscribed in big, bold script: "To my great friend Don King. Jimmy Carter."

The picture was made during the Presidential campaign in either Macon or Plains, Ga. (King couldn't remember which.).

"It was a beautiful thing," he said of the campaign. He said he got a lot of votes for the Democratic candidate, who keeps in of touch with me all the time." Later Don The Times would draw a parallel between the career of the farmer who could go from the fields to the Oval Office, the most powerful office in the world, and yours truly, a product of the hard-core ghetto, an ex-numbers operator and ex-convict who could rise to the pinnacle of the boxing world. Certer and I have had a somewhat synonymous life.

The "Number One premier promoter in the boxing world" had invited the press up to hear about nine fight cards that he was lining up for January, February and March and a couple more planned for April and May. He conceded that it was a fairly imaginative program and the press tended to agree on hearing about a six-bout show to be staged on the flight deck of the aircraft carrier Lexington off Pensacola, Fig., with the precision flying team called the Blue Angels roaring wing to-wing over the Gulf of Mexico.

One for Alma Mater

More or less like Athena, who sprang fullgrown from the head of Zeus, King burst upon the scene three years ago fully attired in sequined dinner jacket, to promote heavyweight championships in venues like Zaire in Africa, Kuala-Lumpur in Malaysia and Manila. Then, balked in his campaign to take charge of boxing in Madison Square Garden. he went into partial eclipse with the Capital Centre in Landover, Md., as his base, "When the legend himself took a temporary leave of absence," he said yesterday, "many thought I was just going into a hole and headed for extinction."

defense by Roberto Duran against Vilomar Fernandez in Panama and including a match between George Foreman and Larry Middleton and a doubleheader presenting Foreman versus Jimmy Young and Duran against Hector Medina.

In addition, he outlined plans for top contenders in eight weight divisions to compete in an elimination tournament for United States championships with a total of $1.5 million in purses for winners and losers. He said these shows would be presented, with no admission charge, on the Lexington, at the Military and Naval Academies in West Point and Amapolis, and at "one of my alma maters, the Marion Corerctional Institute" in Marion, Ohio.

And $15 Million More

"The U.S. championship tournament is truly a dream come true," the legend himself said. "It will revitalize boxing in all divisions. All the championships have cluded us. They have went to Latin America. They have went to Europe. They have went to the Far East."

He outlined an escalating pay scale for tournament fighters. The heavyweights, naturally, get most $15,000 a man in the quarterfinals or first round, $30,000 each in the semifinals and, in the final bout, $135,000 for the winner, $45,000 to the loser. Thus the champion would collect $180,000 for three bouts, the runner-up $90,000.

Who is putting up the money?
"I have sold all the programs to television and 1 am selling sponsorships in other areas. Like Botany 500, who would clothe the champion. I'm talking to General Motors and Ford, who might end up giving cars to the winners, and I'm falking to fast-food chains. There'll be contests where, if you pick so many champions in advance, you would get a trip to the Bahamas for the whole family."

In his spare time King is working "very hard and dedi-catedly" on raising $15 million for a rematch of Foreman and Muhammad Ali. If he succeeded and it became necessary to postpone the Foreman-Young bout, he would promise Young the first title match with the winner.

All promoters want Foreman and Ali, including those at the Garden, whom King described as "inept in their matchmaking, archaic and behind the times, and I know when I not a note and needed for extraction." making, archaic and behind the times, and I know when I Not so, he said, amounting an extraordinary schedule of speak with such candor it can come back to haunt you." attractions for television, beginning with a lightweight title. He said he had nothing against the people at the Garden.

U.S. Hopes in Cup Soccer Hinge On Victory Over Canada Tonight

By ALEX YANNIS

Despite the possible loss of its regular goalkeeper, the United States national team is favored over Canada in a World Cup qualifying soccer game that will be played in Haiti tonight.

The match became necessary after the two countries finished in a tie for second place in a group series that was won by Mexico. The decision to have the game played at a neutral site in Port-au-Prince was made by the inter-national federation, FIFA, the world governing body of soccer, after the two conotries failed to agree oo a site. The Americans, who have triumphed in both warmup games they played in the Netherlands Aotilles, may not have Arnold Mausser in goal, Mausser, a 22-year-old native of Brooklyn who plays for the Tampa Bay Rowdies of the North American Soccer League, has a bruised hip. Earlier today, the former owner; of the Texas Rangers, Robert Short of Minneapolis, testified that he once offered Finley $1 million for Blue. He said he later nearly traded three players and $500,000 cash for Blue.

MacPhail testified the amendment was added to the 1921 Major League Agreement "to broaden the power of the commissioner" and he said to members of basebail'a establishment tried to define what was meant by "not in the best interests of baseball."

Finley's lawyers, ending the fourth day of their case, hope to finish their arguments in the Federal District Court case by Thursday.

Cornell Lightweights Play

Japanese Eleven Saturday TOKYO, Dec. 21 (AP)—Cornell University's lightweight football team will meet a Japanese college all-star squad in Tokyo on Christmas Day in the first of a two-game series called the Silk Bowl. The second game is sched-uled in Nagova, 165 miles west of Tokyo, Jan. 3.

The 55-man Cornell team arrived here yesterday. The Japanese team is made up of the best players from 20 schools. The United States team is coacned by Robert Cullen.

"Because of the substantial weight differences, Japanese teams have suffered one-sided losses to postwar Unitrered one-sided losses to postwar United States visitors on a dozen or so occasions," Mīkio Shinotake, besd coach of the Japanese, said. "The Japanese were lucky if they scored one touchdown in each game. "This time, the average weight of the Japanese is about the same as the American light." about the same as the American light-weight league's limit of 158 pounds. On even terms weight-wise, I'm sure my team will put up a good, close fight."

President-elect Carter, will be invited to see "the two greatest punchers in the world."

Time Bombs in the Ring

They are Foreman, who will meet Young, and Duran, who will face Hector Medina of the Dominican Republic. Foreman and Duran, said the promoter, who likes to compare himself with P. T. Barnum, are both bombs walking around the ring waiting to be detonated." King said he hoped to match Duran and De Jesus in a "battle of titles" in late May.

However, King hopes the Foreman-Young match does not materialize. If Ali wants to fight Foreman in late May or early June, King said Young understood that he would have to wait, but in return would get the first shot at the winner. There was a chance, King said, that Ali-Foreman II could be held in September, allowing Foreman-Young I to go oc.

Who is Fernandez?

"Not since Mike Jacobs has any promoter been this active in boxing." said King, prond to be able "to dance through the tolips with ABC and CBS." King said he wanted to give back to boxing what he had taken out. "Like the farmer who has returned his profits to the soil-boxing is my soil."

He said the sport, leaving the era of Ali, needed "revitalizing in all weight categories-too long it has been one hig fighter in one hig division."

He had a point. At his news conference, someone asked where Fernandez, Duran's challenger, was from. Fernandez is ranked No. 2 by both the World Boxing Association and World Boxing Council, "He's from New York," someone else answered.

The tournament, which will have junior middleweight and junior waiterweight divisions for the semifinal and final rounds, is King's gamble that the American public again will accept boxing as a major sport "even without George Foreman or Muhammad Ali."

The tournament, which will be televised by ABC, gets under way with matches in the heavyweight, lightheavyweight, welterweight, middleweight, lightweight and featherweight divisions. Ring Magazine supplied a list of rated fighters from which King made the matches. The first show, the one aboard the Lexington, features the sixth-ranked heavyweight, Larry Holmes, against an undefeated fighter from the stable of Angelo and Chris

Sports Medicine Plays a Key Behind-the-Scenes Role in East Germany

ing in competition by the German Democratic Republic," Professor Tittel said. "We believe sportsmen should win medals with their own bodily endowners." But then he added that the legality of using steroids was still under study. We don't need them, he was saying without denying that they may have used them.

In fact, according to Dr. Alois Marder, an East German sports specialist who took refuge in West Germany two years ago, use of steroids is probably

All in the Training

"You imagine that a doctor comes and gives an athlete a magic shot that makes him swim faster," be said. "That doesn't exist. I know that in my time in the East German system they had begun experimenting with steroids— helping bodily development with shots where they could help. But the doctor has to know all the other factors before steroids can do any good."

What the East Germans have perfected is not so much magic pills or shots as truly scientific training programs in sports from swimming to rowing to the shot-out event.

Every coach who graduates from the Leipzig Institute—and there are more than 7,000 of them in schools and sports clubs around the country-has been through a five-semester sports medicine course that begins with chemistry and physics, goes on to hiomechanics and ends with an introduction to practical sports medicine.

Dr. Marder began a study of lactic acid levels in theblood of champion-ship athletes while he was in East Germany, and Professor Tittel acknowledged that this research had cootinued at Leipzig in the two years after he left. It is a method that can he used to predict the maximum performance attainable by an athlete by analyzing blood samples taken at various points during a workout.

Dr. Marder worked in the elite sports club in Halle where Kornelia Ender trained before winning four Olympic gold medals. He took a sample of blood from her earlobe in 1973 and knew she could swim the 100-meter freestyle in 56 seconds, as she did in Montreal last summer.

Lactic Acid Is Key

"Lactic acid builds up in the blood-stream as the muscles work hard," Dr. Marder explained at the West German Sports Institute in Cologne, where be is trying to do the same kind of re-search be did in the Communist country from which he came.

"It builds up to a certain level and then exhaustion sets in. If you measure the levels in a swimmer's bloodstream at a constant speed after one, two, five and 10 minutes, you can draw a line on a graph and predict accurately how fast he can swim-and then train him up. to that level." Some athletes' metabolisms, he claims, make it impossible for them to work their bodies as hard as Miss Ender could.

The method has been used as a training aid in both parts of Germany."It had just started in East Germany when I was there," he said, "aod it's certainly been pushed farther—but the results are kept secret. Sports is practically a military security area there."

For reasons of security, officials did not open the sports research department of the Leipzig Institute to a recent visit by a group from the foreign press. It has an analog computer, Dr. Marder says, on which everything from rowing to swimming meets can be

"There is a special club for crew in Grinan," be said, "where they simulate crew races. Theo they can program the optimal strategy for a real crew race what stroke to begin with, when to accelerate it, and how to finish-and rehearse it in a dry run."

"You're tested medically before you are taken into a championship sports club to see what your physical capacities are," said Siegfried Brietzke, a 24-year-old member of the Leipzig Institute's sports club since 1968. He rowed for the 1972 and 1976 East German Clumpia. man Olympic crews and is now a stu-dent at the institute.

"Our students are anything but ma-chioes," said Dr. Walter Renner, deputy director of student affairs at the institute. They are buman beings, with good and bad qualities. They're not robots."

Roswitha Krause, a 27-year-old studeot in East Berlin who swam the 100meter freestyle in 1 minute 2.04 seconds in Mexico City in 1968, noted that things had changed. "Science has so changed our training methods," she said, "that today I might just be able to finish in a meet of 12-year-olds."

General-Education Courses Spreading to Graduate Level

SO On."

Concerned that graduate and professional students are becoming too specialized in their skills and too provincial in their outlooks, senior officials of Columbia University are looking for ways to incorporate in graduate programs the principles of "general education" that bave long been part of its undergraduate program.

The move reflects the judgment of faculty members and others that, contrary to the prevailing wisdom among students, employers are beginning to look for graduates with broad skills as well as mastery of a specialized field.

It is also a response to fears that "overspecialization" is contributing to growing public mistrust of the pro-

"We have lost a sense of common knowledge and common values among the professions," said Theodore deBary, executive vice president for academic affairs and provost. "Members of various fields are alienated from each other, and not enough effort is being made to relate work in the professions to the problems of society as a whole." The trend toward the turning out of students and academicians who know "more and more about less and less" is a long-term problem rooted in the proliferation of knowledge that has occurred in all fields, and especially in the sciences, over the last few decades. Exacerbated Situation

In recent years this trend has been exacerbated by the intensified competition for jobs and seats in graduate school. Robert Belknap, acting dean of Columbia College, noted that students had come to identify specialization with security. "They are afraid that the other student will get ahead if they don't take a lot of narrow technical courses," he said.

The conviction is now growing among Columbia faculty members, though, that the trend toward specialization has gone too far. One reason, cited by professors in virtually every graduate school, is that the profes for which they are preparing students are facing oew demands.

James W. Kuhn, vice dean for academic effairs of the School of Business, for example, said that the growing significance of the not-for-profit and public sectors in management required concepts that went beyond traditional academic categories. "Yoo can no longer get along on con-coocepts like 'the bottom line'," he said. Moreover, he continued, the questions businessmen are posing cross tra-ditional lines. "What they want us to help them with are problems like why artists distrust businessmen," he stated.

Preparation Questioned

Mr. Kuhn also raised the question of whether training in isolated disci-plines was realistic preparation for the professions. "Professors may live in a world of distinct fields, but in the real world you usually end up dealing with all problems at once," he observed. iness leaders tell us that we're giving them too many people who can handle old problems and oot enough who can handle surprises."

Such views were echoed by senior faculty members in other fields. Charles Frankel, the professor of philosophy and public affairs who also teaches in the law school, reported, "I talk to senior partners in Wall Street law firms, and they tell me that they can give young lawyers what they need to know about tax law. They want people with broad understanding—the sort of thing you get from reading Dostoy-evsky as well as law books."

Richard Plunz, associate professor of architecture, said that in his field "the bottom has dropped out of traditional jobs."

"The new opportunities are for peo-pla who can function in a Federal hureaucracy or as community architects," be said. "And in emerging fields like historical preservation or the en-vironment, you obviously seed to handla a variety of disciplines."

Steven Marcus, Delacorte Professor in the Humanities, said that the trend had even affected college teaching. "With the number of positions open for assistant professors what it is these days, colleges are looking for people who can do two or three things, not just one," he said.

Another major factor is the growing sense that professions themselves are losing public credibility because nar-

In a year that has produced many notable bridge books, the most readable is surely "Bridge With a Perfect Partner" by P. F. Saunders, a retired English schoolmaster. He has created an arrogant expert named Wilson whose post-morten specialty is eniurging on his own brillance or the stupidity of his partner, the unfortunate narrator, an average performer.

The reader who buys the book— $6.95 hardcover from Barclay Bridge Supplies, 8 Bush Aveoue, Port Chester. N.Y., 10573—cao expect to be irritated by the insufferable Wilson, entertained by the deals, and painlessly instructed in many aspects of play and defense. The diagramed deal and following excerpt from the book show the appeal

Jim cannot look after himself because he "couldn't bear the everyday-ness of everyday." Unlike Marjorie, he has no ordinary self, only a theatrical one, a pastiche of fin de siècle poet, drunken genius, Nietzschean snob and just plan deviant.

Jim's relations to women are highly peculiar, but Marjorie is not good enough even for this. He must go out into the night, which is like a packed theater to him, and seek "tall, blonde women." In their finest hour together, Jim throws up on Marjorie, and this is perhaps the perfect epiphany for their marriage. Yet, because she believes in him, in his genius as a writer, Marjorie accepts this role. She is awash, you might say, in humility. One remembers, with difficulty perhaps, the days when some men were geniuses and their women were exymoronic combinations of nurse and muse.

Marjorie's brother, Isaac, also "betrays" his parents, by becoming a rabbi. As she puts it, "He was among the first in his generation to practice downward social mobility." The joke is not new, but Miss Roiphe tries to retwinish it has been it to the Ell's refurbish it by placing it in the 50's. In a rare sentimental moment, sister and brother go to a synagogue together, where she learns that she has to sit upstairs behind a curtain because she

By now, Marjorie says, she has "be-come resigned to thinking myself as stale lemon-meringua pie in the Horn & Hardart slot, waiting for someone to drop in a coin and release me from the glass prison." She begins to admit to herself that, for Jim even after she has nagged and nursed him into writing his first successful book, she will always be someone to throw up on. She understands at last that her love for him "might be nothing more than my own ambition." Marjorie belongs to another, only slightly modified generation of Jewish mothers, those who want an artist for a son instead of a doctor, who still live vicariously. Filled With Distraction

When it is all over, Marjorie looks back on Jim and thinks of him as a "flirtation with fame," a "courtship of immortality." "He distracted me from myself," she observes, and the reader does not know whether this is represented as a gift or theft. "He filled certain voids," she confesses, as it was inconceivable that she might have filled them without him. "Nothing hurns and purifies like a first love," she perorates, "there's too much reason and caution in what follows." And here is the central flaw in "Torch Song." Even for the So's, this "Torch Song." Even for the So's, this is going too far. It simply is not true. Marjorie overgeneralizes her own case history—or, rather, the author does. Miss Roiphe is one of those novelists who occupy a limbo between glib and profound, who are too good to be dismissed and not quite deep enough to be taken to heart. She is too clever for her characters, tending to outwit them whenever they try to show that they are human in spite of everything. You might say that she is more interested in metaphors than in men and women.

Would-Be Masters Are Getting Chance to Learn the Hard Way

By ROBERT BYRNE

The kind of round-robin tournament where the participants are all approximately the same strength provides the aspiring master with much better training than the normal Swiss system event, which mixes players who are good, bad and indifferent.

In a round-robin of pairs, there are no casy marks and, therefore, no days in which to rest between encounters with the really tough opponents. If you iose a game, you do not get paired with a relatively weaker opponent in the next round, as in Swiss system courneys. There is no relief from unremitting struggle.

Since the vast majority of competi-tions in the United States are run as open Swisses (to accommodate large numbers of entrants), our masters have not generally bed the right preparation for advancement to top-level play. Now, however, this gap is being filled by a series of round-robin tournaments. sponsored by the United States Chess-Federation.

In the first one, the New York Futurity, held at the Manhattan Chess Club, Louis Levy produced a beautiful mating attack to defeat Craig Barnes. Against 2 P-QB3—an idea of the Rus-sian theoretician Semyon Alapin (1856sian theoretician Semyon Alapin (1856-1923)—it may be best to anticipate White's build-up of a strong center by 2. The Cabinet Choices

In choosing Dr. Harold Brown as Secretary of Defense, President-elect Carter offers the nation for the first time a man to head its military establishment who is fully conversant with strategic weapons in all their awesome power and intricate complexity.

As head of the Livermore Laboratory, a major center of weapons research, as the Defense Department's research chief and then as Secretary of the Air Force, Dr. Brown gained a sophisticated knowledge of missiles, planes and nuclear bombs. He is highly qualified to preside over the Pentagon in a period of rapid technological

In recent years, Dr. Brown has served oo the American delegation to the strategic arms limitation talks with the Soviet Union and is fully informed about the tangled problems that have delayed a SALT II agreement. He should be able to work effectively with Secretary of State-designate Cyrus Vance in reaching Mr. Carter's primary foreign policy objective—control of the weapons of mass destruction.

Having served as Secretary of the Air Force from 1965 to 1969, Dr. Brown was directly involved in high policy decisions concerning the Vietnam War. At his news conference yesterday, he rightly spoke of that "catastrophic" period with its egregious mistakes of judgment. It would serve no useful purpose to try to determine whether Dr. Brown was a "hawk" then and is a "dove" now. President-elect Carter has made it abundantly clear that the United States ought not to go plunging militarily into underdeveloped countries and that military action should be reserved for those rare occasions when this country's vital interests are directly threatened.

Dr. F. Ray Marshall of the University of Texas is Mr. Carter's surprise choice as Secretary of Labor. Although he lacks the long experience in labor-management bargaining of former Secretary John Dunlop, he otherwise brings an impressive background to his new post. He is one of the nation's foremost experts on manpower problems including apprenticeships, upgrading of unskilled labor, and the special needs of black and Mexican-American workers. Dealing with these problems is central to the Labor Department's task

Although part of today's unemployment is due to slow economic growth, it would be wrong to ignore the particularly serious difficulties that women, young blacks and rural workers encounter in the labor market. Since Dr. Marshall, Dr. Juanita Kreps, who is to be Secretary of Commerce, and Dr. Charles Schultze, who is to be chairman of the Council of Economic Advisers, are wellversed in manpower problems, President-elect Carter has assembled a strong team to deal with unemployment.

Patricia Roberts Harris, an articulate and accomplished attorney, is easily one of the nation's best-known women. She was on virtually every list of possible Cabinet appointees in a Carter Administration. She is relatively inexperienced in the housing field, but on her record, she is likely to give the Department of Housing and Urban Development the intelligent and spirited leadership that it requires.

Long active in the Urban League and the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, she is sensitive to the housing needs of the urban minorities. She is also an astute negotiator, having gained diplomatic experience not only as Ambassador to Luxembourg but also in the more arduous job of Credentials Committee chairman at the Democratic National Convention in 1972. The Housing Department is a daunting assignment because the nation has yet to solve the problem of how to provide rental housing for low-income families. Mrs. Harris will need all of ber vigor and resilience in ber new assignment.

Landslide in Jamaica

Jamaica's fourth general election since independence offered the voters a clear-cut choice and they delivered a clear-cut verdict: a landslide for Prime Minister Michael Manley's People's National Party (P.N.P.). It was unfortunate that the election was held under a state of emergency and with some Government opponents in detention; but the dimensions of the P.N.P. victory left no doubt that most Jamaicans want Mr. Manley to continue to lead the country toward his own brand of demo-

It is obvious that a large majority of Mr. Manley's own people believe his assertion that Communism "is just not part of the stream of our history," and rejected the opposition's allegation that his developing ties with Cuba threatened to move the country toward Communism. Mr. Manley, who had accused the C.I.A. of conducting a "destabilization" campaign against his Government, now says he will seek improved relations with the United States—an effort that ought to elicit a positive response from the Carter Administration.

A stable Jamaica, making steady progress on its social and economic problems, would be an influence for stability in a restless Caribbean. It is clearly in the best interests of the United States to assist in this process; and over the long run Jamaica's links to Cuba might prove to be an asset for peace in the region, rather than a liability.

Explanations, Please

The Transit Authority has evaded a direct response so far to a Board of Estimate order that it hold a public. bearing oo proposed service cuts. A senior officer insisted that the Authority would "always comply with legal requirements," but declined to acknowledge that the hearing order is legally binding, as the Board insists.

Whether legally binding or not, a full public airing of the T.A.'s plans for further reducing bus and subway service is clearly in the public interest-and in the longterm interest of the Authority. Transit riders who will be vitally affected by any change in schedules are entitled to an explanation of why specific changes are being proposed and to a chance to respond with alternatives. Now the struggle begins for the power that once was his:

that might point to better, more acceptable solutions.

Service reductions are no doubt unavoidable in view of the serious fiscal problems facing the city and its public transportation system. The Authority and its patrons have a mutual interest in developing cuts and new scheduling that will cause the least public inconvenience and gain the widest possible public support-an interest that can best be served through the hearing which the Board of Estimate has demanded.

The Mayor

Mayor Richard J. Daiey of Chicago was the last and perhaps the ablest of a vanishing breed of big-city sses. New York has not seen a leader in city politics with his unrivaled power since Charles Murphy of Tammany Hall died more than half a century ago. Other big-city mayors or party bosses in the old style-James M. Curley of Boston, Frank Hague of Jersey City, Tom Pendergast of Kansas City-met defeat or disgrace at the end of their careers.

But when Mayor Daley died Monday at age 74, he was serving his sixth consecutive term, having been overwhelmingly re-elected last year, and his control over the nation's second-largest city was undiminished.

He liked to boast that Chicago is "a city that works" and, if one wasn't poor or black, in a limited sense he was right. By deft cooperation with the city's business community, be smoothed the way for a construction boom that remade Chicago's skyline in the last two decades. He held welfare rolls down while keeping essential services functioning at minimal cost. But Chicago has not escaped the problem of "white flight" to the suburbs, endemic police corruption and excesses as well as the same fiscal pressures that plague other cities.

Although a big and small "D" democrat in principle. Mr. Daley was an autocrat in practice. He tolerated no criticism or insubordination in his own political organization. The harsher face of this authoritarianism was evident to the nation on television during the police riot against young dissenters that marred the 1968 Democratic National Convention.

Like many other autocrats before him, Mr. Daley refused to limit his power by designating a successor.

Where Nielsens Fear to Tread

If public television's 260 stations are to succeed in their mission of offering an alternative on the dial to network broadcasting—so dominated by the demands of sponsors and the ratings system—then they must be innovative, courageous and immunized from the pressures of commercialism. Particularly in public TV, you know you're doing something right when you're "In trouble."

Public TV is in trouble, but not necessarily for the right reasons. Once again the temporary truce between the Corporation for Public Broadcasting and the Public Broadcasting Service has turned into guerrilla warfare. C.P.B. is a Federally supported independent agency that sets high-level policy and dispenses funds to public TV and radio stations. P.B.S., which interconnects these stations and gives public broadcasting the potential strength of a public network, is more directly concerned with programming on the creative and community levels.

Of late, C.P.B. has gone beyond its proper role. While doing an impressive job in helping to convince Congress and the White House of the need for long-range funding, it has stepped over into the programming side without having the credentials or skills to do so. Holding the purse strings is not necessarily the right qualification for producing public affairs or atts programs.

Next month C.P.B. and P.B.S, will meet formally-instead of trying to create a patchwork peace behind the scenes without airing the differences publicly. At this meeting, scheduled for Jan. 13, the voices of some of the most creative stations and public TV producers and documentarians should be beard. C.P.B. and P.B.S. are instruments of the Federal Government: their role is to encourage and support strong programs without governmental pressure-including theirs.

The burden of programming cannot be shifted to benevolent foundations or private corporations seeking to improve their own images. Nor can public broadcasting grow in the United States in the arts field by depending mainly on imports—such as the excellent dramas and documentaries from the British Broadcasting Corporation. These should continue, of course, and there should be even more trans-Atlantic co-productions such as those regularly on Broadway; but American drama needs also to be developed and advanced over the Public broadcasting has a wide open field to explore in the fields of news analysis and documentary programming. In recent seasons, these have been overlooked by the commercial networks. Here is where the local stations and the interconnected P.B.S. network can make a strong contribution to knowledge of the news of the cities, nation and world.

Marshall Plan for Lebanon

To the Editor:

Lebanoo is emerging from an internal war with an estimated 50,000 killed and 250,000 wounded in a population of less than three million . . . one out of ten persons is a casualty.

This human debacle has left a legacy of hate among the several ethnic, religious and political factions that make up this country. As a start toward peace, the guns of this conflict are being silenced by the occupation of a 30,000-man Syrian army. To secure the peace, immediate constructive steps must be taken on a scale that requires the support of the Americans.

First, we should respond to the buman crisis of the 20-month war. Hundreds of thousands of Lebanese lie wounded and sick, in desperate need of doctors, nurses and medical supplies. Americans should take the lead by providing the transport and logistics as well as technical man-

Second, Americans should respond to Lebanon's physical disaster. As the Marshall Plan responded to postwar Europe in its suffering, hate and destruction, a Marshall Plan for Lebanon would offer a new beginning. With accelerated rebuilding, a reconciliation may be achieved among the several communities formerly at war with each

Lebanese, as did the Europeans, can rapidly rebuild their country within a rational program, adequately financed and competently managed. Lebanon's immediate neighbors have the deep concern to provide the financial resources to undertake most, if not all, expenses of restoring the country. This undertaking will take several years and may well exceed $10 billion in cost. But money alone will not get the job done. To assure that available funds achieve their purpose, the management skills of Americans along with their Marshall Plan experience, are needed.

Beirut is the "International City" for the Middle East area of 100 million. It is the cultural, social and educational center and the commercial and banking capital for much of the area east of the Mediterranean and west of the Indian Ocean . . . a veritable gateway to the world much as Hong Kong is to mainland China.

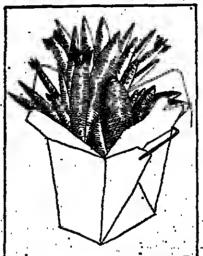

Moreover, Lebanon, in many important respects, has much in common with the United States. It is distinguished for the public election of its government leaders, free press, individual rights, protection of private property and a unique tradition of providing a home for refugees from ethnic, religious and political persecution. Lebanon deserves the full measure of our support.

To Replace Terror

To the Editor:

The Warsaw-Pact powers have proposed to NATO a mutual pledge never to become the first one to use nuclear weapons against the other. Obviously, such a promise would demolish the balance of terror. A NATO spokesman was quick to reject the proposal, stigmatizing it as pure propaganda. Of course, the Communist side expected us to refuse, thereby shouldering the odium of not having agreed to an important step toward removing the threat of a nuclear holocaust.

Why did NATO burry to make the categorical reply the Eastern alliance Would it be imp work out a counterproposal coupling the suggested pledge with the obligation of the Warsaw powers to restore the equilibrium through adequate reduction of their superior conventional

But the matter is much too serious to be considered exclusively from the propaganda point of view. Is it oot the universally professed goal of all governments finally to replace the balance. of terror with less barbaric means of securing peace? Truth in Business News

To the Editor:

This letter is in response to Mr. Ferguson's Dec. 10 Op-Ed article "Truth in Business News." If there is a lack of truth in business news, the businessmap has only himself to blame. Truth in business oews will only come as a result of an improved credibility on the part of our business leaders and business itself. Two events must occur. First, and most important in my opinion, husiness through its actions must change its currently tarnished moral image. (I don't think I have to point out specifics to Mr. Ferguson or other major business leaders.) And secondly, business must do a better job explaining to journalists and the general public bow our economic system functions.

It is time for business, perhaps by endowing professorships of business management at our major universities, than defensive position. If it does not, the death knoll for our economic system has certainly begun to ring.

For Meaningful Arms Reduction

To the Editor.

Congratulations to The Times for its editorial of Dec. 2 entitled "Curbing Conventional Arms." This commends a proposal of e United Nations Association panel, which included Cyrus Vance, to freeze American and Soviet military spending and conventional forces and "to seek a one-year reduction of 5 to 10 percent in Soviet and American defense budgets by 'mutual example as a first step toward meaningful arms reductions."

Sixty million people on this planet are working on military endeavors. Total military spending in 1976 exceeded $300 billion.

It is becoming increasingly clear, as Labor Department statistics bave shown, that military projects are among the least productive of employment, as well as being highly inflationary.

Far more tragic than the dollarsand-cents picture, however, is-the dismal future facing our children. Every arms race in history has culminated in a war. Why should this one be any

The President-elect rejects the idea that our young people, our civilization, our hopes for the future are doomed. Yet precisely at the moment of his debut comes the "discovery" that the Russians are "pulling ahead of us."

The timing of this "discovery" is no accident

Remember the famous "missile gap" of the 1960 election?

President Kennedy after that election, stated that he had learned that the "missile gap" never did exist. Yet it was used to terrify millions of people who took the word of the military and intelligence community on faith. The ploy was used to advance Pentagon interests on the most fraudulent and cynical terms. ...

The timing of the present campaign suggests we have another "missile gap," another buge campaign to head off anticipated Carter economies and peace initiatives.

It is difficult to believe that some would deliberately try to defeat the President-elect's efforts toward what may well be the last chance for a peaceful world. For them the arms race can spiral upward forever with no one ever having to pay the piper. But life is oot like that. The piper will have to be paid. The dream will inevitably end in the nightmare we've all tried to forget.

Unless people decide now to support the President-elect in his efforts to take those initiatives and to build those worldwide structures which alone are capable of creating true security. NORMAN E. HUNT

Could not the Federal Bureau of investigation topple the rule of organized crime, or must the President also tremble before its barons?

He must be a truthful, honest, and open man tempted to secrecy only if the very life of our nation depends upon it . "The truth will make you free."

Most important of all, he must believe that each man and woman is made in the image of God and bas within him and her the divine spark which awaits the fanning of the Spirit, America wishes to be proud of itself, not of its arms. America will sacrifice, if the goal is a high bumanity, if her leader is clearly motivated by the shining ethic of the book he knows so well.

We have forgotten, Mr. Carter, how great we can be. Hold up before us, by your word and action, the boly mirror of the Bible, so that we can see ourselves as we are made to be.

CHICAGO-It is hard to believe that Richard J. Daley is dead. For a Chicagoan, it is an especially stunning moment. For 21 years, he was the boss, the Ultimate Clout. At City Hall, he was The Man on Five, They came to him, obeisantly: precinct captains, industrialists, Presidential candidates.

Unique among contemporary mayors, be was the last of a species. Even to those of us who found so much of his work appalling his death is astonishing Soch power, no more.

In death, the myth of Mayor Daley is as pervasive as it had been during his surrealistic tenure. As the news came over the wire, an earnest young man murmured: "Our city will be a terribla place to live in. The fight for power will spill out into the streets."

I had no idea Chicago had been that peaceful a city these past two decades. I have the distinct impression that something or other spilled out into the streets during the August dog days of 1968. The violence of that week was wholly gratuitous. It was a matter of one man's autism. Our Mayor's reputation was, for a time, tarnished, as the whole world was watching. It need not have been. Had he the acumen attributed to him, particularly by TV commentators, nothing much would have happened, nothing much changed, none would have been the wiser.

Yet, the myth persists: Mayor Daley was a consummate politician. As a figure of national importance,

Richard J. Daley died on election night, 1976. Again, it need not have been, and none would have been the wiser. Autistically, he chose a handpicked hack, Mike Howlett, as bis party's gubernatorial candidate against a bighly popular young Republican. Jim Thompson swamped Daley's choice by an unprecedented majority and thus carried Illinois for Gerald Ford. Had the Mayor been in shouting distance of the real world, circa 1976, he'd have chosen Alan Dixon, a young Democrat remarkably popular down-state. Thompson would bave been given a real run for his money and Illinois would have undoubtedly gone for Jimmy Carter. The myth of the kingmaker would have been intact.

As one who often found his Ozymandian behavior outrageous, I was singularly moved by his appearance on TV late that night. He was a man run over by a truck, without the slightest understanding of what it was that hit him: The real world.

It was a truly poignant moment: the emperor in tattered robes a broken man. For so long the total boss, he had become a totemie figure. Yet at' the moment of his most profound humiliation, television's best and brightest were at their best, though not their brightest, in nursing along the myth: Daley did his job. Cook County went for Carter.

Charlie and Rosemary are Cook County. For 21 years they had been the Mayor's ultimate weapons. Charlie and Rosemary are precinct captains. They are known to every voter on their turf; it's been their turf since childhood, in most instances. They fix your parking ticket; they get your kid out of trouble; occasionally, they get your brother-in-law a part-time job; they do assorted small favors. In return, they expect one small favor: voting the ticket. (Even this, of late, has been more honored in the breach.)

Charlie and Rosemary are on the city's payroll. They are in the thousands. Their job tenure depends on bow well they carry their turf. It is bere that the Mayor has been a consummate craftsman. As a watchman. His "intelligence" covers our town. Indeed, at the moment of his death, an expose of police spying made the headlines. A Federal judge has enjoined the city's police-intelligence division from further snooping on law-abiding citizens. The judge's decision is being appealed. The police insist on their_ right to spy. The Mayor had been their . most staunch defender.

As for his legacy: Chicago is the most segregated large city in the world aside from Johannesburg. An old multiracial neighborhood was destroyed in the name of "education." Another has fought for its existence since: the Mayor vowed to run an expressbreaks while small-bungalow owners pay through the nose. Our schools, hlack and white, are a scandal. Fear, as in other cities, is endemic. Yet the myth persists: Mayor Daley made Chicago work.

The question is, for whom? It is conceivable that Richard J. Daley might have been a different Mayor-and ours a different city-had sycophancy among so many of our Respectables not become the order of the day. It is upon this we should reflect rather than on the nature of the man who died. Let him be.

the twenties by the corruption in his Justice Department, Harry Truman had trouble by putting his own friends in charge of justice. Dwight Eisenhower promoted his political manager, Herbert Brownell, to be Attorney General, and Mr. Nixon eppointed his law partner John Mitchell, who put politics and personalities ahead of principle and is still under indictment for crimes never before charged against an Attorney General of the United States.

Against this background, it is odd that President-elect Carter decided to nominate his personal friend, Griffin Bell, as Attorney General. The Governor was warned against this by almost every member of his staff, but he rejected their advice.

The people on Mr. Carter's staff are not only privately but publicly critical and feel that he is losing the theme that won him the nomination and election in the first place. For the first time since his election, Governor Carter is in trouble with his own people. It has been coming on during the nomination of the Cabinet. but has really become an issue with

The special thing that has made this town hopeful about Mr. Carter is that his nomination of Mr. Bell as Attorney maybe he had a new philosophy, maybe even a new integrity to bring to national politics. Lip service is still paid to the twinpillar, or dumbbell theory enunciated during the Kennedy Administration and envisioning a strong united European Community attached by a trans-Atlantic bar to North America. The simile referred to approximately equally important weights or approximately equally significant towers of strength, linked in alliance.

Leaving aside obvious facts such as (1) that NATO is relatively far weaker, compared with its Soviet bloc rival, than was true fifteen years ago and (2) that the European Community, although numerically including nine rather than six members, has made little progress-disruptive tendencies are visible on both sides of the Atlantic. The West is not drawing closer together, it is coming apart. This is less complicated but perhaps more distressing in North America than in Europe.

Canada is apparently getting ready to tear itself asunder for emotional if illogical reasons which, on a massive scale, resembla the language dispute that continually splits Beigium, or the combination of religious, linguistic and historical quarrels that have wrecked the Republic of Cyprus, which derived from mainland Greece and Turkey.

Following British imperial ascendaricy in Canada, the English-speaking population there was customerily awarded a lion's share of administrative and economic advantage and Quebec's French-speakers understandably resented this disfavor.

a few years hence. Such a separation would weeken the existing structure of the officially bilingual state.

Moreover, bad feeling between the two successors of present-day Canada might further exacerbate relations between each of them and the gigantic United States below them. Whatever happens, it is hard to foresee much good for the West ensuing.

Meanwhile, on the European side, a rash of separatist movements is in vogue. It is not only a question of perpetual aritation in Belgium, where the Flemish-speakers have gained by their higher birth rate, or of the Cyprus tragedy where a Turkish invasion has caused a deep crisis between two NATO allies; it is a phenomenon manifested in many places.

The desire of Italy's South Tyroleans to join Austria seems undiminished amid the greater see of national troubles. Spain's efforts to establish democracy are enormously complicated by Catalan and Basque autonomous and/or separatist movements. Portugal's Azores archipelago keeps toying with thoughts of independence. And even if they are not : serious, Corsican "freedom" and Breton (as well as Basque) nationalism are political factors in France.

Here in Britain it is astonishing to e what vigor has been mustered behind the so-called "devolution" cause sponsored by those who wish to diminish ties of Scotland and Wales to London's authority. The 19th and much of the 20th century were poisoned by British efforts to curb Irish nation-

This ended in the island's partition between a free republic and a sullen -Ulster where mini-guerrilla war still : rages and where there is even talk by some Protestant extremists of a "milatered declaration of independence" from Britain. That would probably loose rivers of blood in sectarian war with the Republic of Ireland and civil war in Northern Ireland.

But the thought that Wales and : above all Scotland-tempted by its proximity to the vest North See oil pool and greedy for a bigger share in its output should want to weaken the United Kingdom idea so short a time after Britain began to play a " serious role in the European Com- : munity, is heartbreaking:

The fathers of European unity preached from the start that small successor states of the erstwhile great empires had to move together to foster continuation of the energies and talents that in the past bad made them great. In one or another way they extolled the idea of "in union there is strength." But all one finds on surveying the present status of their dream is that in dismity there is weakness.

Also under appeal is an order at Hartsfield International Airport in Atlanta, the nation's second busiest, re quiring solicitors to set up booths and not roam about the airport.

After having its restrictions on distribution of literature and soliciting struck down by the courts, Washington National Airport put up 20 prominent red, white and hive signs telling passengers: "Religious groups, in an exercise of their First Amendment rights, are distributing flowers and literature

"Unfortunately, they're here," said. Timothy Pierce, manager of LaGuardia, speaking of the Hare Krishnas. "Under the First Amendment rights, they're allowed to describe their religion and seek donations," he said. "But they're a pretty aggressive bunch and we do get complaints."

although that is often ignored.

Most airport authorities feel their hands are tied because the solicitors. have legal status as members of a taxexempt religious groups entitled to all constitutional freedoms.

Complaints are mounting from barried passengers almost everywhere; a few of whom have taken swings at the more aggressive solicitors, usually members of the International Society for Krishna Consciousness, commonly referred to as the Hare Krishnas.

"We've never had e problem until the Krishna group arrived on the scene," said John Carr, manager of O'Hare Airport, the nation's busiest. Several religious groups operate in O'Hare, proselytizing, solicting funds, both. Among them are the Jews for Jesus. Foundation Faith and the Jesus People USA, as well as the Hare Krishnas and the so-called "Moonies,"

Forrest Nichols, a security guard at O'Hare in charge of regulating solici-tors, said that each Krishna averaged $125 to $150 a day in solicitations and that the airport got about five com-plaints a week about them.

Use of Airport Facilities

Moreover, the Krishnas resort to what amounts to disguises, giving up the saffron robe that is the vestment of their sect in fevor of less exotic clothing like a leisure suit—or, as in New York, a Santa Claus costume, or, as in Phildelphia and San Francisco, Bicentennial garb, with the men as Minutemen and the women as Betsy Beyond passenger complaints, air-

Joseph North, a veteran correspondent and editor for The Daily Worker, died aire Howard R. Hughes. Monday of leukemia at a hospital in San Juan, P. R., while on a visit. He was 72 years old and lived at 103 Cambridge Place in Brooklyn.

Mr. North worked for The Daily Worker, the Communist newspaper, and its successor, The Daily World, for 45 years. He covered the civil war in Spain in the late 1930's with the Loyalist army and the United States Army's liberation of German concentration camps in the wanng days of World War IL

While assigned by The Worker in Cuba in 1961 he accompanied the forces of Prime Minister Castro when they repelled the Bay of Pigs invasion. On assignment in Hanoi in 1972 he filed dispatches on the United States's Christmas bombing of the North Vietnamese capital.

In his autobiography, "No Men Are Strangers," published in 1958, he de-scribed his war correspondence, as well as meetings he had beld with such major figures as Lincoln Steffens and Ernest Hemingway. He wrote a number of other books and many pamphlets.

He was the editor of the newspaper's weekly World Magazine from 1968, when The Daily Worker's name was changed, to 1972, and was its Moscow correspond-ent from 1972 to last year.

In a 1958 interview published in The Daily Worker, be described his book as "a personal history—the tale of how this ordinary Joe came to a Marxist position."

It could happen to every man," he added, "except for this: I'm passing through with a pencil and paper, and I'm looking around. In looking I came across Marxists in the early Thirties who con-vinced me their philosophy, their social science was just and true."

He also wrote "Cuba: Hope of a Hemisphere" and "Robert Minor, Artist and Crusader," a biography of a noted Com-munist cartoonist and editor, and edited New Masses: An Anthology of the Rebel

Another hook in progress when he died was to have been an account of his world travels.

Much of Mr. Leaf's career as a writer, illustrator and lecturer was involved, in one way or another, with the Government. During World War II, be wrote a unorthodox military manual on malar-it and the new manual on malar-it and the newspaper craft at The Chester Times.

He soon shifted to the left and edited the magazine Labor Unity, the Labor Delenter and the New Masses, the Communist rent ment of the side.

Mr. North joined the Communist Party in the late 1920's and, for the last 10 years, was a member of the party's central committee in this country.

L.I. Court Cuts Backlog The New York State administrative

judge, Richard J. Bartlett, said the Suffolk County Family Court, using new management techniques, had reduced the court's backlog by 64 percent this year. The court, the state's secondbusiest Family Court in 1975 after the Brooklyn Family Court, reduced its backlog from 8,400 cases to 3,034 cases as of Dec. 3, Judge Bartlett said in a report. "I commend Administrative Judge Arthur Abrams and the other judges and support staff of the Suf-folk Family Court for their success in reducing, by almost two-thirds, the largest backlog of pending proceedings of all the Family Courts in the state," Judge Bartlett said. The judge said that the reforms introduced included a reduction in the state. duction in the number of adjournments, widening the court calendar and cutting back on paperwork.

'Mikey and Nicky,' Filmon Am

By VINCENT CANBY

Elaine May's first two films, "A New Leaf" and "The Hearthreak Kid," were comedies of sometimes inspired and often touching lunacy, mostly about the uncertain progress of romantic love between men and women. Her third film, "Mikey and Nicky," which opened yesterday at the Little Carnegie, is something else entirely.

It's a melodrama about male friendship told in such insistently claustrophobic detail that to watch it is to risk an artificially ioduced anxiety attack. It's nearly two hours of being locked in a telephone booth with a couple of method actors who won't stop talking, though they have nothing of interest to say, and who won't stop jiggling around, though they plainly aren't going anywhere.

"Mikey and Nicky," which Miss May wrote as well as directed, takes place in one approximately 12-hour period. It involves a lot of self-conscious exposition that never quite succeeds in telling us ail we have a decent right to know.

It's about a couple of small-time
Los Angeles hoods who've grown up together, joined the same month. and now, on this particular night, find their lifelong relationship passing in front of our eyes in aggressive close-up.

Nicky (John Cassavetes), convinced that his bosses have put out a contract on his life, summons Mikey (Peter Falk) to his hideout in a fleahag hotel. Nicky needs help, He's scared ont of his wits. Mikey: "How do you know it's Nicky: "How do you know it's not true?"

Later in the evening Mikey angrily accuses Nicky of having nicknamed him "the echo" for always saying everything twice. But so do Nicky and everyone else in the film. Miss May used to write that kind of dialogue to be funny. This time she means to be serious hut the method isn't good enough.

"Mikey and Nicky" folk friends as they wander in desperation around a mount and as we learn events Mikey is, in fact, the fine of By this time, though to retrieve the film iron of busy banality that Mr. vetes' own films, including a cent "The Killing of a C Bookle," fall into when across the district of the district of the cent of the ce

By RICHARD EDER Peter Bogdanovich knows a great deal about movies, including how they are made. Perhaps he doesn't know why they are made. In any case, knowing how something is made isn't the same as making it. "Nickelodeon" is two hours and two minutes of impersonations.

Some of them are very good impersonations—deft and funny—but they lack a life to string them together. The effect is like a vandev-illian imitating a Frenchman mak-ing a speech. The imitation is fine hut there is no speech,

Despite its length, which is of its problems, there isn't much movie in "Nickelodeon," which opened yesterday at the Columbia

I and II Theaters.
Its subject has been pretty heavily treated of late. It is ahout the early days of movie-making.
Slapstick in style and picaresque in form, it is closer to such spoofs as "Hearts of the West" and "Won. Ton Ton the Dog Who Saved Holly-wood Inan to "Day of the Locust" or "The Last Tycoon."

It is not really a spoof though.

At the end Mr. Bogdanovich has his raggle-taggle band of movie makers, given a contract after many reverses, pass a lighted sound-stage. "They're making a movie," says Ryan O'Neal, as their rolled through a program that in-cluded pieces by Chick Corea, Miles Davis, Milton Nasiecemento and Mr. Matthews as well as a free wheeling free ment of "Velan-choly Baby" that hecame an ex-tended challenge between Mr. Matthews's two trumpeters, Joe Shep-ley and Burt Collins.

The discipline and precision of the band made Mr. Matthews's arrangements crackle with excitement but without any apparent strain. It is a band that is completely at home within itself, sure of its direction and playing with obvious joy. The only weakness it has at present is the lack of identifiable personality, either as a unit or among its soloists.

In both aspects, the performances are clean and polished but with the anonymous quality common to studio musicians—which is what most of Mr. Matthews's men are. There are moments when some individuality peeks through—particularly in the work of Harvie Swartz on bass, Frank Vicari on tenor saxophone and Sam Burtis on trombone but the soloing tends to follow modern stereo-

and the comments of the

Mr. Bogdanovich mistreats his love for the vitality of American movie-making by proclaiming it so hreathily. He mistreats his love for the tricks of the trade, especially the slapstick comic trade, by virtually italicizing each trick as he trots it out.

Harrigan—Mr. O'Neal—is an in-competent lawyer who meets up with Cobb, a manic film producer who is battling the hlg companies. Some meaningless remark leads Cobb first to hire him as a writer, there is easily him out all as a writer, then to send him out West to take over a band of actors and techni-cians whose director has decamped, Harrigan gets entagled with an unskilled hoofer—played by Jane Hitchcock—and an unskilled rodeo rider-Burt Reynolds —adds them to the company, and begins to make movies. It's easy, the cameraman tells him "These are the actors. This is the camera. You tell me where enough you tell me 'cut.'

It is a nice rendering of the casual improvisation of early movie-making—parodied, but only mar-ginally. Mr. Bogdanovich arranges for some good things to happen. There is a fine trolley-car sceee where Cohb's film company rides to the set inventing the script along the way. Not only is the idea-man subject to fits, he also produces ideas only when he has

One of the year's most moving and sensitive movie experiences. will be a sad and despondent loss for anyone who misses it...'VOYAGE OF THE DAMNED' is engrossg and powerful...an epic film. It is more fulfilling and refreshing than I can tell you. Director Stuart psenberg has done a magnificent job. To weave such a splendid tapestry of humanity, a cast of unecedented artistry was needed, and every performer has responded. Everything about 'VOYAGE OF IE DAMNED' has been touched with greatness...memorable portraits etched in blood, preserved in eauty and deeply felt. It is perceptive, eloquent and enduring—here, at last, is a film that elevates its ewers. 'VOYAGE OF THE DAMNED' towers above most ordinary movies in theme and execution. EXPERIENCE

By MEL GUSSOW

Though John Ford Noonan's material can be strange, even macabre, his approach is good-natured and amiable. He has an impish, off-center humorand he also has an unfortunate tendency to be whimsical, amply demonstrated in his new play, "Good-By and Keep Cold" at the Ensemble Studio Theater.

"Good-By and Keep Cold" ostensibly concerns a crisis of adolescence. Tracy Pendleton, a pampered teen-ager, has come home to her family's summer bouse on a Maine island after her first year at Mount Holyoke. Claims are made on her by her worshipful college roommate—her sculpture of Tracy makes her look like a gloomy Virgin Mary—a rich boastful suitor, a super-cilious mother and an eccentric father.

Although the suitor is a bore-he glaries in his own conceit and in his bad singing voice—the two young women are moderately interesting as they gnash at each other's vulnerabilities in the name of friendship.

However, it is the parents who tend to dominate the evening—and they are tiresome company. The weak father, an amateur horticulturist, bathes in bourbon and toasts his own anemic will. In contrast, his imposing wife has the strength of a battleship. She glides through the play like a rejected char-acter from "Hay Fever." She has some of the Coward manner, but none of the language. She thinks she is charming. I thought she was insufferable.

After an encounter with these matched elders, one would war take the next boat to the main of but we are island-locked and can unity to incoming visitors for yone of the guests gives the plant welcome injection of humor. E Cashion Smith a hard-knucked tro Cashion Smith a hard-knuckled tro

The production by James Hamstein moves smoothly from terrac beach to woods. The acture are ficient even when the characters unbearable, with the evening's entertaining contributions coming Don Plumley as the hired killer Beverly Barbieri and Leab Mark Tracy and her adoring roommate.

Musica Sacra's Virtuoso 'Messia'

Handel's "Messiah" has been nsed and abused in every conceivable performance fashion during the 234 years of its existence, but at Avery Fisher Hall on Monday night it bad the glitter and grandeur of a brand-new masterpiece.

Richard Westenburg and his Musica.
Sacra performed the venerable oratorio with a combination of virtuosity, musi-cianship, sensitivity and theatricality that was almost breathtaking at times. The sweep of the work, the pacing of the individual numbers, the phrasing, the ornamentation, the interplay of voices and instruments—all were beautifully planned and executed.

There was nothing stiff or mannered about the performance. On the contrary, an air of spontaneity reigned over almost everything. But only the most carefully-selected 29-voice chorus could sound as magnificent as this one did and that only after a lot of rehearsal

And the spectacular solo singing of, say, Richard Anderson the bass-baritone, is not something tossed off without rigorous exercise of brain, breath and vocal cords. The duet be-tween bim and Martin Berinbaum, trumpeter, in The Trumpet Shall Sound" was nothing short of se tional Mr. Anderson produced o mented phrases of almost incred length and brilliance, and Mr. Be baum complemented the vocal li with instrumental playing of rem able subtlety.

The two other male soloists, Da Collins, countertenor, and Dz Smith, tenor, were also impress from start to finish. Maria Spacas the soprano, sang sensitively at times, but the fast vibrato in her verifications of the source o did not come under really satisfact control until near the end of

Ultimately, credit for every asp of the performance, including alert response of the orchestra the well-modulated organ conti-playing of John Weaver, had to ascribed to Mr. Westenburg, wh concept, concentration and con obvinusly made everything happen

whether this "Messiah" would pleased Handel himself is impute to know, but it is difficult to beliate any finer interpretation of work could be realized in terms current scholarship and present musical faster.

Mr. Baryshukov himself, far from seeming weighed down by the cares of creation, danced with exceptional clan even for him. As his Clara, Marianna Tcherkassky, dancing with the shy, tentative pride of a girl at her first ball with the beau of her dreams, was delightful. This is not the glittering tutued Sugar Plum who usually reigns in the Kingdom of the Nutczacker, but offesh and blood little girl on the edge of womanhood. Alexander Minz was a perfect Drosselmeyer, his sinister elegance and commanding presence held the stage as if hy magic.

In the divertissements the company went to it with a will, and I was particularly impressed with Clark Tippet. Kirk Peterson, Aires Hammerli, War-ren Conover, George de La Pena and Ronan Jasinski Jr. This production completes Ballet Theater's Tschaikovsky Trilogy—but let us hope that the company treats the "Nutcracker" as a work to be given occasionally throughout the year, not as some vast Christmas bon-bon that dominates the winter repertory. That proviso apart, this "Nutcracker" is a fine thing to have around.

let: Joffrey's Holiday Season

By ANNA KISSELCOFF

The plot is simple, even silly. But so what? Pineapple Poll and the rest of the female population of a Victorian port pine away after handsome priggish Captain Belaye. Poll is the bumboat woman, who sells snacks to the crew of the H.M.S. Hot Cross Bun. ts first Christmas season, Beliet came up with a last night at the iCty surprise was John Cranko's Poll," not given here for now as bright as a halfintessentially British ballet, new staging by Celia Fran-r part of the program con-petrouchka," a familiar item Jasper the pot boy (that's what it says in the program) is in love with Poll and he has a knack for looking dejected. The love triangle is not remote from apany repertory and in a of which the Joffrey is de-roud. If it's children you go in your ballets at Christ-Petrouchka" has enough of the bill. that found in "Petrouchka," if you sub-stitute the macho blackamoor for Belaye, the Ballerina Doll for Poll, and Jasper for Petrouchka. The sensibility The bill. In place of three of each work, bowever, is very different.

"Pineapple Poll" always skirts the danger of cuteness. The second half is not quite as witty as it should be. But footlights. In place of three the current staging overcomes these ets on a program, there are mably catering to younger 'ans. Like "The Nutcracker" problems with a new element—toogh-ness. Francesca Corkie, in her debut as Poll, not only dances beautifully, but she has caught the appealing vulgarity of the street hawker in her gestures and expressions. Mr. Chryst has maelia," "Petroudhka" deals le Poli" is the ballet that deal with real people and inko's translation of Gilbert and expressions. Mr. Chryst has matured into a fine dramatic dancer and his Jasper reaches straight out to the heart. As Belaye, Gregory Huffman stresses the role's effeteness rather than its bravado, hut this is a valid interpretation. Trinette Singleton's Mrs. Dimple is a comic masterpiece, while Ingrid Fraley has the fight mix of shrewdness and vapidity as Belaye's bride. a, of course, there is nothing them. They are types. The ensemble is the best seen in the Joffrey's version. Above all it is professional, and this takes in the young man, whose pants split last night and who kept right on dancing.

For Mr. Chryst in Stravinsky's "Petrouchka," the title role continues to be a triumph. It is a very individual interpretation. Here is a very angry Petrouchka, always in a rage and one who goes down fighting. As the Blackamoor, Christian Holder dances with a beguiling stavity.

As stated, the bonesty is there. But "Regrouping" is marked by a plethora of fragmentary, unrelated information —scenes on city streets, a supermarket, a ladies shower room, a couple dancing, two women making love — that make no specific points. And the sound track includes often confused, clipped or overlapping conversations. clipped or overlapping conversations, by unnamed individuals that add to the fuzziness of this admittedly mani-

But they are beclouded by disparats, unresolved views of the real issues and problems of these authentically concerned peo-ple. Their "Regrouping" is a sincere effort but it merely has the effect of a rough-hewn work in progress.

In the lobbies of the Carbide Building at 270 Park Avenue and the Fisher-Park Lane Building at 299 Park there are real toys on display—footballs, six-guns and holsters, Erector sets, stuffed animals, bicycles and dolls. They have been donated by Carbide employees and such Fisher building occupants as Kobe Steel, Dun & Bradstreet, and Robert A. Becker.

"We maintenance people have given, too," says an elevator starter, pointing to one of the gaily wrapped piles. The toys will be dispatched to several major charitable organizations for distribution to needy children this week.

In the American Brands lobby at 245 Park, the gilded representation of Powhatan—the company's symbol, father of Pochlontas and father-in-law of John Rolfe, grower of the first commercial crop of tobacco in the Jamestown settlement—stares enigmatically at still other piles of expensively wrapped parcels. These are not for distribution. They are not to the decor. They distribution. They are part of the decor. The decorators seem to have had a competition; up nd down the billion-dollar segment of the block the lobbies are thick with spruce, scotch pine fir, wreaths and poinsetties—some perfumer with reality, some clearly genus plustica.

The foliage is almost as ubiquitous as the red white and blue mail trucks parked along the Avenue, At 277 Park, a mailman fills a sack with the cascade of envelopes that has come down the building chure and drags it across the lobby floor.

The sack is almost as round and fat as old Santa himself, and a visitor wonders how the mailman is going to squeeze it through the re-volving door. Tricks to every trade. The mailman stands the sack upright in one segment of the

Britain Convinces Others Economy Will Strengthen

New Help for Pound From Industrial Countries Is Expected to Result

By CLYDE H. FARNSWORTH

PARIS, Dec. 21-Britain, under what was described as "tough but not hostile questioning" at a meeting in Paris, convinced its industrial partners today that it was headed on the right track to strengthen its economy.

As a result, fresh credits were expected to be forthcoming to finance both a previ-ously agreed loan from the International ously agreed loan from the International Monetary Fund and a safety net now being negotiated to keep any further withdrawal of sterling balances from causing new plunges in the international value of the pound.

British officials were asked detailed questions about the country's latest belitightening measures at a session of what is called Working Party Three of the Oganization for Economic Cooperation and Development, This O.E.C.D., committee includes high financial officers of the leading non-Communist industrial nations.

"There was a general consensus that the British program is going in the right direction, namely toward major structur-al changes in the next two to three years, which in turn should lead to stability of the British economy," said Otmar Em-minger, chairman of the working party. As vice chairman of the Bundesbank, West Germany's central bank, he represents one of the major creditor nations. The United States, Japan, Switzerland and the Netherlands are among other creditor countries called on to supply

Defielt Spending Slashed

Last week to qualify for a $3.9 billion loan from the international Monetary Fund, Britain's Chancellor of the Exchequer. Denis Healey, presented a special austerity budget in which public spending and mooey supply growth were sharply curbed. Mr. Healey sald deficit spending would be cut by at least $5.7 billion over the next two years, and be indicated that money supply expansion would be held between 9 and 13 percent.

At the same time the British are oegoti

At the same time the British are oegotiating a third-year renewal of the so-called social contract under which average wage increases are held below the 15 percent rate of inflation, which means a loss of purchasing power for British workers.

Because of exceptional drains on LMF, resources, the Washington-based world lending institution does not have enough money on hand to supply the $3.9 billion. So, following a plan worked out when a similar situation arose in the early 1960's, the major creditor nations, under a similar situation.

1960's, the major creditor nations, under an arrangement called the General Agreement to Borrow, come np with supplementary resources. Before they act, however, they satisfy themselves that the borrower is taking the kind of policies that will result in reasonable chances that the money will be paid back.

This was one of the main subjects at a series of meetings this week in Paris. Dr. Emminger said his committee would be reporting its recommendation, that the be reporting its recommendation, that the supplementary resources be activated, to another committee—the Group of 10, which meets here tomorrow. The procedure is pretty much of a formality because the two committees are composed of almost the same nations and the same officials. They simply wear different hats. Working Party Three concentrates on balance of navments prospects while the suce-of-payments prospects while the Group of 10 deals with some of the more intricate monetary questions.

It was learned that the United States will be supplying $1.1 billion, or 28 percent of the loan, its largest portion. Germany's share is $920 million, or 23 percent. Japan's share is $630 million, or 16 percent. Among other leading creditors, the Swiss are providing $345 million and the Dutch $120 million.

In discussing Britain's prospects with newsmen at O.E.C.D. beadquarters today.

Dr. Emminger said there was little doubt that Britain, thanks to North Sea oil flows, would begin producing surpluses in its balance of payments again, beginning in 1978. This year tha British are expected to show a deficit of $2.8 billion.

As deficit spending is reduced, Dr. Emminger noted, the British should be able

Avis's Top Officer Quits Unexpectedly

By GENE SMITH

Avis Inc. announced yesterday that Winston V. Morrow Jr. had resigned as chairman, chief executive officer and a director. Tha company gave no reasons for the unexpected action.

A company spokesman said only that the board of directors had accepted Mr. Morrow's resignation, effective Dec. 31, and had named Colin M. Marshall, 43years old, as chief executive officer. He will retain his post as president.

The vehicle rental company also said it would resume regular quarterly dividends with a payment of 10 cents a share on Jan. 26 to stockholders of record Jan. 3. Avis last paid a dividend, also 10 cents a share, in November 1974.

Mr. Morrow, 52, could not be reached for comment; and other officials of the company declined to answer any questions about the change in top manage-However, a source close to the company

Fission, Fusion, the Sun-Energy Choices?

By VICTOR K. MEELHENY

In the opinion of a self-styled "de-spairing optimist," the 20-year-old, multinational drive to harness thermonuclear fusion to create electric power resembles a group of pioneers crossing a river and climbing a mile-high mountain—only to confront a range of mountains 10 miles high.

The despairing optimist is David J. Rose, professor of nuclear engineering at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. Long an independent critic of work on fusion; Dr. Rose now is participating in the massive, 18-month Na-tional Academy of Sciences review of nuclear energy and alternatives to it.

He thinks that work on fusion is being supported "pretty aggressively" in the United States and several other nations. In the fiscal year that began Oct. 1, the United States Energy Research and Development Administratioo plans to spend more than $300 million on fusion work, about $80 million more than in the preceding year.

Dr. Rose's view of energy supplies for the future is gloomy. "In the long run," he said in an interview the other day, "we've got three things, fission, fusion and solar. You ask me which is in the bag for the big time? None

He added, "Of course, the one that really gets shortchanged is energy con-

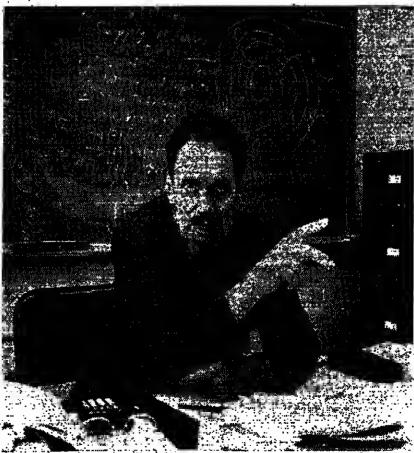

Because fusion could reduce future disarmament problems, Dr. Rose said, it is "socially very desirable." "We can't afford not to explore it. I refuse to say it won't work, although it might

Because fusion might have to substi-tute in case of problems with nuclear fission, "Breeder" plants now being de-veloped, or a delay in solar power, Dr. Rose said, "I wouldn't like to throw away one third of my insurance policy

With Michael Feirtag of Technology Review, a magazine published at M.I.T., Dr. Rose wrote an exhaustive review of the prospects for fusion power in the magazine's December issue.

The two authors described one of the major problems of a fusion system, confining the nuclei of atoms of deut-erium and trithin—both heavy forms of the element hydrogen—so that the atoms will fuse into helium and release

They wrote, "Contining a plasma (in this case the nuclei of deuterium and Continued on Page 50, Comma 3

It would seem to follow that when banks lower their charges they make less money. But the recent reduction of the prime business lending rate to as low as 6 percent does not protend a profits squeeze, according to several leading bank analysts.

It matters not, they say, that the banks get less from borrowers if they pay less for their raw material-

The analysts note that the decision by the Morgan Guaranty Trust Compa-ny on Dec. 10 and that of the First National Bank of Chicago on Monday to lower the prime rate to 6 percent comes at a time of reduced costs for Federal funds, which were quoted at 4% percent Monday.

Federal funds are excess bank reserves lent between banks and are a key indicater of changes in overall interest structure. When Federal funds drop, so also do other rates that banks pay for their own borrowings.

In any event, the reduction to a 6 percent prime, should it become gener-al, comes at a time of increasing inter-rallying strongly for the last two weeks. The question now is where the bank stocks will go in the weeks aread. Several bank analysts said that prospects for banks were improving, James G. Ehlen, a bank analyst for Goldman, Sachs & Company, said that his firm was giving regional banks an "over-weighting" in suggested portfolios, while the money-market banks as an analysis. while the money-market banks are getting "normal" weighting.

Mr. Ehlen added that the bond trading operations for banks that maintain government desks probably were particularly profitable in the fourth quarter, since loterest rates have fallen with a consequent rise in bond prices.

He did not identify banks that may have benefited from such activities. Morgan Guaranty and the Bankers Trust Company usually have substantial positions in the bond market. Mr. Ehlen endorsed the view that benks had managed to maintain mar-gins feirly well while interest rates had turned downward. If there has been erosicn, he said, it has probably occurred in international operations. Mr. Ehlen favors Bank of America shares, primarily because business con-dicions are improving in Californ bank's primary market.

Another analyst commented off-the-record hasis. He said he impressed with the prespects c regional banks, which have "strong liquid positions" over the few years. All that is necessar a strong market for their shares

NEW PROVIDENCE, N. J.-When the Coddington property became available, Nat Conte wasted no time. Ha had had his eye on it ever since he started building the quaint shopping and office center known as Murray Hill Square in the Murray Hill section of this town west of Summit. With the Coddington land, he could expand.

The expansion is in construction now—14 more two-story buildings that are pages from New Jersey's past. They are a continuation of the historic resurrection embodied in the 17 buildings of Phase 1, where some very modern selling methods for clothing, fabrics, silver products, yerns, stationery, timepieces and whatnot are practiced in buildings that are accurate conics of measurements. curate copies of pre-20th-century bouses, schools, churches and civic buildings.

Someone is selling children's clothing in what looks like a Victorian school-house. In fact, it is a copy of an 1850 school that once stood on Springfield Avenue, and now, minus most of its Victorian decoration, serves as the Inside clothing is tacked to what looks like blackboards, and genuine old school desks have been modified into store fixtures. The checkout, counter is a schoolmaster's desk. Elsewhere, men's clothing is for sale in a reproduction of a grist mill that once stood on Maple Street and Springfield Avenue. There is a rustic atmosphere in an interior thet is three stories high and crossed by beams and trusses, that appear handbewn.

There is a reproduction of the Elkwood railroad station, which was once a stop on the Erie-Lackawanna run to Summit. There is a slate roof, a handcrafted copper rain diverter, a bell tower, a boarding deck and fabrics for sale in a baggage cart. Downstairs,

When Mr. Conte finishes Phase 2 next summer, he will have produced a total of 70,000 square feet of shopping space and 30,000 more of office space in what was formerly nondescript industrial land just beside the New Providence railroad station of the Erie-Lack-ewanna. He will renovate the railroad station itself if the railroad goes along.

The beginnings were modest. Mr. Conte was — and is — in the heavy construction business and for years he rented the barns, cement block structures and coal yard near the station for bis trucks. In 1972 he bought the property, Visions of small retail shops in a renoveted barn complex fired his imagination, and they were stoked imagination, and they were stoked further when two more abutting ecres became available.

From old buildings around the state he salvaged the best in beams, flooring, old hardware and siding. To raise money he borrowed on his house and his equipment. For a year he worked to get a rezoning from the Board of Adjustment, using homemade models to demonstrate the "Williamsburg effect" he wanted to achieve.

Now he owns 11 acres in all, and tha town has established a new commercial zone. He is a trustee of the New Providence historical society, with access to the numerous pictures and records of the past from which the plans for the buildings are taken.

His architect, Alexander Bol, makes the plans from greatly enlarged pic-tures of frame buildings in the refer-

"You gotta be smart to keep going this time of year," he says.

Christmas means parties, lots of. them. At some companies, they are unstructured—planned and paid for by.

the employees, usually on a depart-mental basis. Sometimes—as at Sea-gram, for example—there is a little money tucked away in the departmental budget.

At other companies the annual Christmas do is very much part of the official calendar. LTT., for instance, is holding its annual party for headquarters people this week at a hotel and on a day that a spokesman, Robert Deasy, would not identify. He was not concerned about gate crashers, but security.

"Considering what's happening these days," says Mr. Deasy, "I don't think we should talk about it. The next thing you know there'd be some out reading about it to the newspapers and who can tell what they'll do?"

1.T.T. will probably be entertaining "upwards of 1,000" employees, will serve only champagoe and soft drioks ("no hard stuff," says Mr. Deasy), and keep the party on a strict 1 P.M. to 4 P.M. schedule.

"Its not one of these endless of the same of these and least of the same of these endless of the same of the "Its not one of these endless office party things," adds Mr. Deasy. "it's not much different from an expensive cocktail party." The office Christmas Party has been getting a bad press for years—the not-always-unreal stereotype being a bacchanale at which some unruly clerk, inflamed by an overdose of cooking whisky, will attempt to puoch out the vice president in charge of sales; or an orgy at which some cormally rational computer programmer—only a glass or two from nausea—will insist on pouring champagne down the decollete of a teen-age typist.

The stereotype is one of the reasons wby many liquor dealers think the of-fice party is on the way out.

said there had been friction between Mr. Morrow and Richard Joyce Smith, court-appointed trustee for the Avis stock that is owned by the International Telephone and Telegraph Corporation.

Avis recently acknowledged that a study conducted by an audit committee of its outside directors had shown that Avis bad made "improper, facilitating or otherwise questinoable payments" of about $425,000 to consultants, government officiels and others. .

Avis said at the time that some senior nfficers had knowledge of some of these payments but that none of the outside directors knew of them before the release of the audit study.

In mid-November it was also reported that the Federal Trade Commission had undertaken an investigation to determine whether certain promotional promotional companies were paid by the three major automobile makers to auto-rental companies were Mr. Conte yawoed and stretched. ments.

Stereotypes are not the stuff out of which Airs. Gloria Boyles, recreation director for Union Carbide, fashions her Christmas parties. She is a hard working effervescent woman who bas been at Carbide for the last 15 years. She puts in long 12-hour days helping to keep running the basketball teams, chess tournaments, bridge clubs, trurs and other activities that are all part of the fringe benefits package at Car-

Responsibility for the Carbide Club's Christmas party is part of Mrs. Boyles's job description, too. This year it was held at the Hotel Roosevelt, with an analysis of the control of the carbide Club's characteristics and the control of the contro open bar, a turkey dinner and music by the Frank Terris orchestra.

About 122 people came, Carbide itself picked up about half the bill. The employees paid $12.50 a head. "We had such a good time," says Mrs. Boyles. "We danced ontil 11:30, and everyone was so nice. There weren't any of the kind of problems you'd expect."

Partly because her job cuts across so many corporate lines, Mrs. Boyles gets invited to many of the Christmas gets invited to many of the Christmas parties thrown by Carbide divisions.
"I went to two last night," says Mrs. Boyles, "and I've got to go to two again tomorrow night, "I just told my daughter the other night," she adds with a laugh, "that I can't wait to see Dec. 26 and the end of this season. I hope my liver holds out."

Very little of the Christmas green seems to be rubbing off on the few

seems to be rubbing off on the few street vendors who work the corporate stretch of Park Avenue. "It's the cops," said a flower seller who was wrapping dollar bunches of chrysanthemums in the shadowy sanctuary of the covered walkway that connects 45th Street with the southeast corner 46th Street and Park. "They really keep us mov-ing, and business is lousy." His indictment was mutely reinforced by a woman who stood at the corner of 48th and Park, taking a cautious read on both the Avenue and the side street as she watched the lunchtime crowd build in density.

Whipping a spattered old dropcloth off the top of her wagon, the woman swiftly set up shop. There was a carton of scarres, a carton of nyloo stocking hals and a cartoo of plastic looking gloves at prices that ranged from $1 to $2.50.

When a passerby stopped and asked how business was, the woman took one look and quickly began to fold up her cartons without a word. The passerby had an open notebook in one hand and a pen in the other.

The insurance business isn't doing too well, either. There was an eir of boredom in the New York Savings Bank's insurance outlet at 46th and Park. In one corner of the office, e salesman sat with a container of coffee in his hand, talking to a secretary, and didn't even look up when a potential client walked in.

A colleague, though—John A. Conte. the nameplate said—brightened at the prospect of having something to do. He expected business to be bad right through the bolidays. "People aren't turned off by insurance this time of year," Mr. Conte said. "They're just a little leery about spending money because they've got Christmas to pay for. "People are borrowing more against their insurance."

their insurance," he continued, "and they keep putting you off when you try to sell them something. Right now,

"is different. You have to stay open. In the commercial insurance business they take vacations in the two weeks through Christmas and New Year's." There were oo complaints at the Brasserie, a popular restaurant with a mainly French meau just off Park. Taking a short break after the lunch crowd had thinned out Assistant Manager Frank Rauschenberger bunched wearily over a cup of coffee and said that both the restaurant and its outside catering business were doing very well indeed. Most of the Christmas parties the restaurant has booked seem to be opting for the lower end of the card (coq au vin at $7.50 the plate) rather than the sirloin at $11.50. Mr. Rauschenberger, his boss Charles Mabila and Chef Erwin Herger are all working 10-hour shifts. One of the big problems is keeping staff morale up under heavy sea-sonal pressures that often make for very short tempers.

The staff is being rushed, and they've got outside parties of their own to go to," says Mr. Rauschenberger. "They're professionals, but you have to make them understand they've got to come to work."

Security is tight in some of the buildings on Perk Avenue—tight enough in some cases so that strangers seem to be getting challenged with a bare minimum of civility. One reason is the pull the season exerts on sneak thieve. "It's a real problem et Christmas time," snid the elevator starter in one of the said the elevator starter in one of the lobbies on Park Aveoce. "You really have to keep an eye out for people you don't know. It's hard because there are so many people in and out."

Easily hidden—or stripped—items such as wallets and pocketbooks are the prime target. The floor director talked as he carefully checked a shopping bag held by a young man who said he had some liquor to deliver.

"What these guys do," the starter continued, "is get on an elevator and cruise. They'll get out on a floor and look around. Sometimes a receptionist: will be away from ber desk and they'll get a chance at a clothes closet, or maybe they'll say they're looking for a job and hope the receptionist will. walk away to get somebody else for him to talk to."

"It's a bad way to feel at Christmas,"tha starter added. "You have to be on your toes all the time, and you can't trust anybody you don't know."

TWO LIQUOR EXECUTIVES ARE FINED $1,000 A DAY

Neither of the executives could be reached yesterday for comment.

The ruling comes in the midst of an ongoing Investigation by the S.E.C. and other Federal and state agencies into ribes, kickbacks and rebates in the nation's liquor industry.

According to an S.E.C. spokesman, a former accountant of the liquor company had charged that Jacquin gave away 15,000 cases of liquor to customers in 1974 to induce further sales. However, when the S.E.C. issued subpoenas for Jacquin's business records, the company allegedly refused to comply. A source close to the S.E.C. iovestiga-

tion said yesterday that the agency went to court in September and obtained an order that Jacquin turn over its docu-

Corporation Affairs

LTV and Jones & Laughlin Restructure Credit

The LTV Corporation and its Jones & Laughian Industries subsidiary restructured their bank credit arrangements by combining existing bank credits of the two into a new Jones & Laughlin credit that provides for borrowings of as much as $195 million. The agreement provides for a group of banks headed by the Bank of America to provide funds on a revolving basis until Dec. 31, 1978, with the amount outstanding at that date to be repaid over a five-year period ending Dec. 31, 1983.

Under the debt restructuring plan, LTV transferred to Jones & Laughlin all of thee common stock of the Vought Corporation, Jones & Laughlin also holds all common stock of LIVs two other major subsidiaries—the Jones & Laughlin Steel Corporation and the Wilson Foods Corporation. In a related action, Wilson Foods entered into a new term loan agreement with the same group of banks providing for borrowings of $24 million payable over a six-year period. Some of the initial borrowings under the new agreements were used to retire all outstanding borrowings under the previous LTV and Jones & Laughlin credits.

Missouri Pacific Orders New Freight Cars

The Missouri Pacific Railroad Company, a subsidiary of the Missouri Pa-cific Corporation, has ordered 600 covered hopper cars of 100-ton capacity each from the Pullman Standard drvision of Pullman Inc., Butler, Pa. It also ordered 400 gondola cars of 100-ton capacity from Constructora Nacional de Carros de Ferro-Carrill, Ciudad Sahagun, Mexico. The combined cost will exceed $27 million.

The cars are part of a capital spending program that includes a total of 2,417 cars and 50 locomotives costing more than $98 million. The railroad has also budgeted $60 million for improvements to roadways and plant next

Fluor Named Contractor

The Fluor Corporation said its Fluor Technical Services subsidiary had been named managing contractor for certain engineering procurement and construc-tion activities related to the establish-ment of a $1 billion ethylene-based Saudi Arabia. The company said it had been picked by Saudi Pecten Petro-chemical, established under an interim agreement between the Government-owned Saudi Basic Industries Corporation and the Shell Oil Company's wholly owned subsidiary, Pecten Arabian.

Natomas Gets Credit

The Natomas Company has completed a $220 million credit agreement with a group of 19 banks led by the Bank of America, the Continental Illinois Bank and Trust Company of Chicago and the Morgan Guarant Trust Company of New York as congress. Company of New York as co-agents. The agreement provides for a one-year revolving credit followed by a six-year term loan. It replaces existing bank credits of $135 million. Natomas said that about $85 million would be used to finance the acquisition of Apexco Inc., a Tulsa-based domestic oil and gas exploration and production com-pany that it has agreed to purchase for $127 million.

Petrofina Plans

Expansion

American Petrofina Inc. said that HS Cosden Oil and Chemical Company unit would buy a 50 percent stake in a plastics operation of the B. F. Goodrich Company's chemical division. The agreement is expected to be completed early next year by which time financial details will be worked out.

Lear Siegler Data Sought

Lear Siegler said it had received a request for information from the antitrust division of the Justice Department concerning its offer to buy all shares of Royal industries at $13.50 a share. A similar request has been made to Monogram industries, which has offered to buy Royal shares at $11 each.

Leyland Forms Company British Leyland, the Government-controlled car and commercial vehicle company, announced yesterday formation of Leyland Japan Ltd. (Nippon Leyland KK), a new company that will import and distribute cars. The new company will be incorporated early next year as a joint venture between Leyland International and the Japanese trading company, Mitsui & Company. Leyland International will own 35 percent of the Japanese operation.

ACCOUNTING RULES BOARD WILL UNDERGO A REVIEW

The Financial Accounting Foundation the sponsor and overseer of the often criticized Financial Accounting Standards Board, yesterday undertook a comprehensive review of the private-sector rule-making body.

Throughout this year, and increasingly in recent months, the standards board has come under fire from businessmen, Con-gressional critics and accountants. Many corporate executives have objected strongly to the board's major pronouncements, while accountants have charged the board with producing too little.

The foundation's trustees yesterday gave the task of review to a six-member standing committee of trustees, which is to report by May 1. The group is to re-examine the board's structure, organization, operations and success or lack

John G. Biegler, the foundation president and senior partner of Price Water-house & Company, promised a "very in-tensive" review. "We think the time has come to take a good hard look," be said.

Big Agencies Expect Big Year in 1977

By PHILIP H. DOUGHERTY

Most of the top people at the top ad agencies, which are coming to the end of a fabulous year, are projecting 10 percent to 20 percent billings gains The gloomy talk about the economy from some quarters doesn't discourage them. At least one of them, John E. O'Toole, president of Foote, Cone & Beldings, even considers such talk a good omen.

"During the campaign," he said,
"Jimmy Carter kept talking about how awful the economy was, and it was a great year for us and our clients. Now he says the economy is worse, so I'd say things are going to be bet-

"They talk about the indices, but in packaged goods indices don't seem to count and volumes are up," said John S. Bowen, president of Benton & Bowles, which during the last year increased its billings 35 percent to more than $22 million. than $252 million.

Over at SSC&B, Alfred J. Seaman, over at SSCas, Alfred J. Seaman, president, predicts a 20 percent gain on top of a similar growth this year. Why? Because, he said, "a lot of hrands and clients have good momentum, and the economy will have to move ahead or Carter will have to make it move, and the consumer will use the money in the marketplace."

New product introductions wave

New-product introductions gave many agencies a lift during the last 12 months as clients moved nationally with brands that had been languishing in test markets because of the econo-

Louis T. Hagopian, chairman of N. W. Ayer ABH International, expects new-product activity at his shop in 1977 to top this year's. Edward N. Ney, president of Young & Ruhicam, the country's largest single advertising agency, says next year will bring an increase "but nothing like this year's." Ha cautiously calls for 10 per-cent compared with the 20 percent gain

Helping him is a "major turnsround" by two important clients—Chrysler and Eastern Air Lines. Next year, ha said, Gulf will become an advertiser again, not with a product campaign but with a "significant program."

Y. & R. is an international operation, and Mr. Ney said: "The health of the husiness worldwide depends on the United States continuing its growth. If the U. S. goes flat, then the rest of the world will be in bad shape." Wells, Rich, Greene, which is up to $205 million in billings, expects to top this year's performance with a. 15 percent gain next year, thanks in part to the January rollout of the Bic razor and the introduction of two new cereal products from Ralston-Purina,

"Next year is our year," said Charles Fredericks, W.R.G.'s president. Grey Advertising similarly profited from introductions this year of Cycle dog food from General Foods and Jon-tue fragrance from Revlon as well as other new products.

While Grey expects continued new-product activity in the coming year, it reports in a prospectus issued in con-nection with a tender offer that, "based on purely internal forecasts, the company does not expect net income in 1977 to be as high as in 1976."

However, Edward H. Meyer, Grey's president, says, "Hope springs eternal, and a couple of good new accounts could change everything."

Cunningham & Walsh enjoyed a pretty good year despite the fact that

its top client, American Motors, had difficulties. But the big thing the agen-cy did in 1976 was to sign a 10-year lease with its present landlord after six months of deliberation during which even Stanford, Coun., was seriously considered.

"But this is where it's at." said Anthony C. Chevins, C.&W.'s president.
Batten, Barton, Durstine & Osborn is not according to James J. Jordan, its president, "predicting any hig in-creases—we never do." However, he noted, the agency is geared for growth and is not expecting any major client losses despite a trade press report that B.B.D.O.'s relationship with Pepsi-Cola is shaky—a report denied by Pepsi. City Seeks Volunteers

Probably a lot of agency types with finely tuned new-business antennas caught the big news yesterday about Mayor Beame's plan for economic re-covery that includes and advertising and marketing program.

Yes, an ad agency will be needed.
And Osborn Elliott, Deputy Mayor for Economic Development, has been having conversations with John Crichton, president of the American Association of Advertising Agencies, on just that subject. However, he would "dearly like it" if the agency would take on the job as a volunteer—at cost.

Ad agencies are not the only outfits that he expects volunteers from He is hoping that major New York cor-porations will lend him some of their top marketing people while other exe-cutives may be asked to join the Am-bassadorial Corps Program. Its mem-bers will be expected to help promote the Rig Apple.

the Big Apple.

That's only some of the ideas Oz Elliott has. There are more, many more. O. & M. Acquisition Set

The expected agreement for Ogilvy Mather International to acquire Cole & Weber, an agency with offices in Seattle and Portland and $33 million a year in billings, has indeed come to

The arrangement is similar to one recently announced between O.&M. and Scall, McCabe, Sloves, in which the acquired agency will retain its autonomy and its management. And again the purchase will be made with cash over a period of time.

3M to Acquire Media Network

The eight-year-old Media Network Inc. and the 3M Company have reached an agreement to merge. Media Network will become a wholly owned autono-mous division and will keep its current tritium] is like taking all the air in a room, forcing it into the center of the room without touching it, and heat-ing it to a temperature of several million degrees."

Dr. Rose said in the interview that he thought the harnessing of such a reaction—similar to one that proceeds within the sun—is increasingly a technological problem rather than one of scientific feasibility.

He said, "It is quite clear that the general original problem got answered almost by the bye."

Contrary to popular suspicion, according to Dr. Rose, the shift of emphasis to engineering problems makes things much harder, not easier. Costs multiply and practical problems grow

Dr. Rose asked how the gases and particles that are to take part in the fusion reactions would get into the reactor chamber and how transmuted waste products would be siphoned off.
Also, how would a continuously circulating, confined gas be held for long periods in its magnetic bonds?

In addition, Dr. Rose questioned how the metal walls of a fusion reactor would withstand unprecedented bom-bardment by radiation. Finally, how would the service technicians of electric utilities get at highly radioactive equipment to repair it?

Trying to solve such vast engineering problems is worthwhile, Dr. Rose thinks, because prompt development of a practical fusion system might allow avoidance of the disarmament problems that could go with the so-called breeder, which would need and generate large amounts of plutonium fuel that might be diverted to nuclear weap-

One bright hope of the fusion engineers, the use of giant laser beams to crush fuel-containing pellets so that fusion: will occur in them, makes little impression on Dr. Rose.

in the Technology Review article, he and Mr. Feirtag write that 10 to 20 mirrors "of most remarkable quality, most carefully placed" will be needed to induce an explosive release of fusion energy in the pellet. Although the enerenergy in the pener. Annough the energy given off will equal that of "a satchelful of dynamite," there is a problem, according to Dr. Rose and his co-author. "Alas, that amount of nuclear heat is worth about 5 cents, even at today's inflated prices and so the explosion must cause very much less than 5 cents' worth of damage and disalign-ment to the optical surfaces, considering all the other costs of building and operating the reactor."

Because of the multiple obstacles, Dr. Rose does not think that a fusion machine will produce electric power be-fore the year 2000. But he does think that scientists and engineers are likely to know whether a fusion power sta-tion will be possible at all by the early 1990's—just the time that commitment to a commercial breeder fission indus try is anticipated.

Yamani Eases Stand On Lifting Oil Output

Sandi: Arabia's: Oil Minister, Sheik Ahmed Zaki Yamani, has apparently tempered earlier promises that his country would embark on a crash program to expand its oil producing facilities as a means of forcing 11 other members of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries to reduce their 10 percent price increase. In a Saudi television and radio interview, he said: "We won't double our oil production. In spite of our huge reserves we know that oil is among national riches that have to be preserved. Sandi Arabia is certainly taking its own interests into account, but also those of the international community. Analysts consider a marked increase in Sandi production—now running at about 9 million barrels a day—to be essential to any reduction of the 10 percent price increase, announced last week and effective Jan. 1, with an additional form by 1 Sanditional 5 percent effective July 1. Saudi Arabia and Abu Dhabi decided to impose a 5 percent rise.

Union Wage Increase

Found to Average 8.9%

At yearend, workers think in terms of their financial outlook for the next 12 months. Will they bring raises, either through their own merit or through collective bargaining?

In a recent survey, Citibapk concluded that wage adjustments agreed upon during the first nine months of 1976 through collective bargaining agreements brought unionized workers increases of about 8.9 percent for the first year's described the agreement. This was somewhat below the pace of 10.2 percent in 1975 and the 9.8 percent rate in 1974.

adorned with a picture of the blond Swedish tennis hero, Bjoro Borg. (Nina stood next to him at Forest Hills last summer, the way she described it, it was her greatest thrill.)

The 'Jeans Generation'

Both Nina and Kathy wore fancy jeans, which they explained were still fashionable. But scruffy faded jeans are definitely out, they said. They both spoke of the "Jeans Generation" as if it were somewhere between the Ice Age and the Stone Age.

"It's not like it was a few years ago." Nina said. "Everybody is into being sophisticated, which makes it more expensive. My mother says, 'Wby can't you dress like a burn, like Lisa did?" (Lisa Goldman, her sister, is an ancient 21-year-old violin student at Hortt College in Connecticut, who grew up in the early 1970's.)

. The girls strolled out of the development, where people were raking the last of the fall leaves, toward a bus stop with a sign "N-77, Hempstead." More than a dozen young people were waiting for the bus.

"It takes almost an nour to get to Roosevelt Field," Nina said, "and the bus only runs once an hour, and it stops running around supper time. You can't even go to a concert at the Nassau Coliseum by bus. You're really stuck up here."

In recent months, Nina has begun taking the Long Island Rail Road to Manhattan, to visit friends or music shows at Madison Square Garden. The round-trip costs $4.10 on Saturdays (as compared with $1 for Roosevelt Field), but the train runs later. It goes to the city. has always taken me there since I was young," Nina said. "Now I have a friend who lives at 69th and Lex. We go to movies, hop a cab, go for a walk, yisit somebody's apartment, go shopping. Now, whenever I go to Roosevelt Field, I keep thinking of Biocmingdale's.

The blue-and-orange ous meandered through the hills of Roslyn into the flatiands of central Nassau, toward the sea of cars that surround the cluster of chain stores.

A Memorable Friday

"Look at those cars," Kathy groaned. "Look at those cars." Katny groaned. "It remember one Friday after Thanksgiving, everybody went Christmas shopping. It took our bus an hour just to get out of the parking lot."

After leaving the bus, the two girls ambled through Macy's, which has such interesting clothes, they agreed, that everybody shops there.

You come to school on Monday and six people have the same shirt on," Both girls acknowledged that they felt strong pressure to dress like other students at North Shore High.

"Everybody doesn't care about grades," Nina said. "Clothes are more important. My father says school is a big fashion sbow "In junior high, people would come right up to you if you had the wrong jeans or comething and say, 'What'e the matter with you?" Kathy sain, "In high school they won't pick on you. But they'li talk about you behind your back." The girls wandered to the smaller shops in a covered mail, where Christmas music and decorations ovarwhelmed the senses.

They scopped at Chandler's shoe store, where tan boots were selling for $44 a pair. The girls pointed to the stitching on the toes and said these were "imitation Frye boots." Both Nina and Kathy had the real thing-overthe calf tan boots, zippered or laced. hand-crafted and costing upward of

"Everything is the 'disco look' now," Nina said. "Gaucho pants. Everybody tries to impress with their outfit. Everybody's conscious of how much it

"They'll come right up to you and say. 'How do you like this? It cost $80.'" Kathy added.

In the mall, the girls bumped into friends from school. One girl displayed an album she had just bought and later Nina said. "She could have gotten it cheaper at Korvette's. They rip you off

The girls said shopkeepers in Roose-velt Field were militant about teen-age shoplifting. And indeed, a young, male special officer peered suspiciously at everybody who wandered in. The girls did not think that was fair because "adults do just as much shoplifting."

They said sometimes they rict boys in Roosevelt Field, but most of their social contacts were with school friends. They said they had both dated, but not as extensively as had one of their 15-year-old friends, who dated only boys over 13 with cars.
"Sure, I'd like to have a boy riend," Nina said, "but I don't feel the pressure to date." "It's not like I think it was in the 50's, when everybody bad to go steady," Kathy said. "I think it's better to have a lot of friends."

Over lunch, the girls talked with awe about a few students who get straight A's, but they quickly said they did not admire athletes or cheerleaders. They both admitted there might be marijnana or alcobol going around, but they said family problems were far more serious than any drug or liquor babits.

The 'Really Cool Kids'

"The really 'cool' kids are usually the ones with the worst family problems," Nina said. "They are insecure. They get into drugs, cutting classes, trouble with teachers, beating kids up. They want attention. They have to make themselves known."

"It's funny," Kathy said. "My parents moved out here from Richmond Hill, Queens, three years ago for better environment. But people here have just as many problems as in Queens—fami-lies breaking up, dope, crime. The sub-urbs aren't what they're cracked up

'I'd rather live in an apartment with a lot of noise," Nina said, "Sure, I know people who have gotten mugged in the city. But if we lived in the city, I'm sure we'd have a good, secure apartment."

Back home, Nina prepared tea and cake and lamented that there were no movies or fast food places within walking distance of their home. They must rely upon rides for most of their entertainment

"I think when children reach this age. they are culturally deprived in the sub-urbs," Mrs. Goldman said. "It's not stimulating here, thless you are a selfstarter. We know a few like that, but it's hard. There's such strong pressure to hang around in a group. These children are ripe for shows and Liuseums and learning for themselves." "And Bloomingle's," Nina added.

"Of course, nostalgically, when I grew up in the city, I was a ioner," Mrs. Goldman said. "I'd go to movies by myself on 42d Street. Even in those days, you might see a few creeps in that area, but the caliber of person walking around now is frightening. Still, I'm starting to wonder if the sub-urbs are really the right place for children from 13 to 17."

¶So far they bad failed to achieve employee pension systems to belp redeem nearly $1 billion in outstanding city short-term notes before the end of next year. Although Senator Proxmire yesterday ruled out the possibility of Federal assistance on the note problem, Mr. Beame said today that the banks and the funds had indicated that Washington 'sbould be involved," at least to the extent of issuing "an expression of Federal attitude" toward long-term budgetary relief for the city. The Mayor disclosed that his staff was working on state legislation to implement reforms of the accounting and actuarial assumptions underlying the city's annual contributions to the pension funds. These reforms had been recommended by a panel of experts beaded by Richard Shinn, president of the Metro-politan Life Insurance Company.

Governor Carey rejected a suggestion from Senator Proxmire that the state do more to extend credit assistance to New York City in the future. He said the state had already seen its credit-ratings suffer as it became increasingly involved in the city's deteriorating finances, and be added that the state's own ability to re-spond was compounded by the $1 billion budget deficit it now faced for next year. Mr. Carey read a letter endorsing this view from Arthur Levitt, tha State Comp-

The letter, stating that the and motor oil were smaller than in other state had failed to collect hundreds of recent months. millions of dollars in eales, corporate and income taxes, was labeled "extraordinargreement from the banks and municipal ly inaccurate" by Mr. Carey, who then outlined some steps he had taken to improve collections.

Mr. Rohatyn's remarks on the city's likely inability to re-enter the credit mar-kets were in contrast to some hopeful observations on the same prospects expressed yesterday by William E. Simon, Secretary of the Treasury.

Mr. Beame and Mr. Carey said that they could venture no opinion on this aspect of the city's future, although they asserted that the city would at least be entitled to credit because of its newly balanced budget and newly installed accounting reforms.

Senator Proxmire, who earlier had said that the city's credit prospects would be "excellent" if it balanced its budget, said later that it was "premature" to discuss further assistance in light of Mr. Rohatyn's more pessimistic comments. He emphasized again that any credit assistance would have to come in the context of assistance for all cities. The city has been shut out of the credit markets-unable to sell its bonds or notes to the investing public since early 1975, and it has had to turn since then to the state and Federal Government, and to the major New York City banks and pension funds, to meet its borrowing needs while it has sought to balance its budget.

For different reasons, each of these sources now says that it cannot continue providing assistance after mid-1978, underscoring the significance of Mr. Rohatyn's comments today. If the city cannot borrow, it cannot keep its operain their efforts to collect taxes, as sug-gested by Senator Proximire when he read construction program.

Food prices declined two-tenths of i percent, the first decline in food prices since last March.

Declines in the prices of a variety of different foods contributed to the drop. Prices of fresh vegetables dropped, after three months of large increases. Prices of dairy products declined for the first time since early this year. Pork prices moved down substantially for the sixth straight month.

The prices of poultry, cereal, bakery products, processed fruits and vegetables end sugar also went down during Novem-

Apparel prices, on the other hand, rose in November after a slight decline in October, as did the prices of used cars. Prices of furniture and tobacco products increased sharply more than in other recent months. Overall, the prices of commodities other than food rose four-tenths of 1 percent, the same amount as in October.

The prices of services also rose fourtenths of 1 percent last month, compared with an increase of five-tenths of 1 per-cent in October. Mortgage interest rates went down, while the cost of operating an automobile, particularly insurance rates and parking fees, went up sharply. The recent performance of the price index makes it probable that the index will record a rise of no more than 5 percent for all of 1976. This a considerably better performance than the Ford Administration predicted last January, when it said that the December 1976 index would be 5.9 percent bigher than that of Decem-

City Borrows at 5.73 Percent

New York City is scheduled to borrow $200 million today from the Federal Government under its seasonal loan program, at an interest rate of 5.73 percent, a record low figure, Comptroller Harrison J. Goldin announced yesterday. The city had already borrowed $400 million during the mouth of December and a total of $1.675 billion smce last July I. The new loan is supposed to be repaid by next June 30, with interest of $5.95 million.

TODAY'S

The Argo Merchant oil spill would rank about 10th in total oil volume spilled from broken tankers, even if all its oil leaks out, but its potential for ecological and economic damage is far greater than its size might indicate.

The spill occurred almost directly over Georges Bank, one of the world's most productive commercial fishing areas, where bottom fish such as flounder, cod, haddock and whiting are harvested by the millions. A large annual heavest of sea scallops and a relatively smaller harvest of surf clams and quahogs (hardsheld ocean clams) is also gathered. The bank is fished extensively by fleets of many nations and the total output of the sould possibly move the northwest and ocean currents could possibly move the northwest and ocean currents could possibly move the nid-Atlantic, where is whether haddock and gallons of oil spoiled the British coast and killed untold amounts of plant and animal life.

Americans remember, was the breakup of the tanker Torrey Canyon off the coast of Britain in 1967, when 31 million gallons of oil spoiled the British coast and killed untold amounts of plant and animal life.

In 1969, the blowout of a well being drilled in the Santa Barbara Channel off the California coast released 5,000,000 gallons of oil. And a dozen other tanker spills in various parts of the world in the California coast released 5,000,000 gallons of oil. And a dozen other tanker spill in various parts of the world in the California coast released 5,000,000 gallons of oil. And a dozen other tanker spill in various parts of the water is winter, and plant and animal life along coestal regions are at their least decade alona have ranged from 5 to 13 million gallons. In 1969 a reative-ly small tanker spill of 220(gallons of light heating oil near Falmouth, Mass., caused soma shellifish beds to be closed to harvesting, and they have oot been reopened.

These include the type and chemical composition of the oil, time of year of spill, amount of oil spilled, weather conditions, and evaporation, oxidation and bac-

Certain plants and animals are more Tanker's Agent Blames the Currents and some species are more capable of returning to their ecological niches than others, the MLT. study found. Such animals as mussels and barnacles can return quickly to their oil-disturbed environments, but many other species of shellfish more senstitive and take mich longer to return to their former area

Influence of Sea Bed

Generally, the type of area-silty sandy or rocky-determined the rapidity with which species could restore themseives. The more silt and sand, the study showed, the longer the damaging effects of an oil spill lasted. The more rocky, the more quickly the environment restored itself.

Most of the scientists and experts who have become involved in studying the Georges Bank spill agree that it is impossible to tell oow, what the total impact of the spill could be. It could be relatively small, if the oil goes out to sea, but its effects there could be long-lasting and of indefinable effect in deep see areas, they said.

In New Redford, Mass., John Sasso, legislative assistant to Representative Gerry E. Studds, a Democrat, who represents all of Cape Cod as well as Martha's vineyard. Nantucket and New Bedford, said that the scallop industry could be deeply impacted for years by the spill. He pointed out that the scallop dredgers had recently begun to barvest the shell-fish in the Georges Bank area.

Scallops 20 miles from the tanker were found to have oil in their shells, indicat-"All I know is that the owners spend over half a million dollars on repairs in New York a year ago and that the vessel of navigation," Mr. Madus said that some draggers of the York a year ago and that the vessel of the vessel's grounding and breakup. "I don't know who is to be blamed," he were reported to have raised clumps of oil the size of softballs.

TV: 14th-Century Holiday Treat

By JOHN J. O'CONNOR WNET/13's "Great Performances" series, "made possible" by support from Exxon Corporation and PBS mem-ber stations, has discovered something very special for the holiday seeson in the program files of the British Broadcasting Corporation. The "Christmas Chester Mystery Plays," which can be seen tonight at 9, are eight short dramatizations used to illustrate Biblical stories. The playlets date from the late 14th century and were first performed by craft guilds in the city of Chester, England.

For television, Piers Haggard, the director, has used the technique of color separation which places the actors within two-dimensional reconstructions of medieval paintings (a similar process was used for a HBC version of "Candide"). The actors are arranged as tableaux vivante in highly arranged as tableaux vivanfe in highly stylized settings, with Stuart Walker's backgrounds taking inspiration from paintings and illuminated manuscripts. The texts have been "modernized" by Maurice Hussey, who has skillfully managed to keep the language simple and unadorned, but within the artistic form of the rhyming cruplet. A special score has been composed by Guy Wolfenden, music director of the Royal Shakespeare Commany, and the cheral

Shakespeare Company, and the choral selections are sung by the choir of New College, Oxford.

Obviously, a great deal of care and research have gone into this production, and the end product is a "naïve" pageant of unusual charm. From "The Fall of Lucifer" through "Herod," the mixture of exquisite visual effects and mixture of exquisite visual effects and maffected performances, including a number of cockney accents and total mudity for the young Adam and Eve, is a thing of rare beauty for the tele-

Beyond the surface effects, there are fascinating elements of theology and dogma, most notably in a preoccupation with Mary as the Blessed Virgin ("Clean maiden that she is/And with ("Clean maiden that she is/And with man never did amiss"). Hal Holbrook's introduction is somewhat unfair to the Roman Catholic Church as the rigid censor of anything that night be entertaining. Medieval stereotypes are incredibly persistent; despite convincing historical revisions. But the plays proper, produced by Cedric Messiana, make everything else tolerable.

Last Sunday NBC ended its serializa-tion of "The Moneychangers," based on a novel by Arthur Hailey. Before the project fades completely into electronic limbo, at least until rerun time, brief notice might be taken of its content. Publicity material described the. project as a "drama about in-lighting and intrigue within a banking empire." That would appear reasonable enough.

But, this being prime-time television,
can gratinious violence be far behind.
Judging from the numerous letters of complaint forwarded by viewers to my desk, the predictable answer is no. The first episode quickly and adeptly established the key dramatic confrontation between socially conscious Kirk Douglas and personally ambitious Christopher Plummer to snare the presidency of the First Mercantile

American Bank in a visit to a slum area, Douglas singlehandedly subdued a gang of Hispanic toughs to establish the project's general aura of unbelievability. That scene got a good dollop of violence into the series, but the most startling "fix" was saved for the con-clusion of the episode. Playing an embezzler, Timothy Bot-toms was convicted and sent to prison, where he was promptly raped by fellow inmetes in what had to be one of the most explicity sexual asseult scenes de-vised without benefit of outright hard-core pornography. That was the scene that prompted most of the letter writers to enter their protests. But The Moneychangers' was hardly finished there.

The final episode offered a helpful recapitulation to that point, including one character advising another that one character savising enough that "I'm gonna cut off your fingers and stuff them up your nose." While a cor-porate public-relations man complained that in the kind of world we live in "every kid with a pencil is a Woodward and Bernstein," Phymmer was having a mental crackup about his business disasters. Timothy Bottoms, now out of prison and working undercover for the bank, was being tortured by Mafia types. A mother and young daughter were kidnapped and roughed up. The bank's security chief shot and killed three of the criminals, and was himself wounded in the effort. Bottoms was hauled off unconscious to the hospital, his fingers crushed by a sledgehammer (Bottoms had a particularly hard time of it in this series). And, finally, Plummer climbed to the top of the bank tower and, with sardonic smirk, casually stepped over the edge.

Next month NBC News will be presenting a three-hour mime-time spe-cial called "Violence in America," which, among other things, will "try to determine why our society seems to be more violent than that of any other industrialized Western nation." The suggestion is hereby offered that NBC News get in touch with NBC En-tertainment and request appropriate clips from "The Moneychangers."

Putting up signs, said Benedict D. Castellano, assistant to the manager at Washington, National, "is about all we plan to do, because if you push it too hard, you end up with the Krishnas given e section of the airport and then they demonstrate, chant and sing all day long.

"At times, the Krishnas come into conflict with other groups. In San Francisco, for example, the Jews for Jesus, converts to Christianity from the Jewish faith, pass out leaflets that say, "Wanna flower? means give us money." They warn "Do not be deceived!" and feature a line drawing of a voung man proferring a book and a young man proferring a book and a flower. Arrows point out "wig." "ready smile" and "more books in bag."

At O'Hare in Chicago, a man named Morris Yanoff heads a group called "Where Is David?," which pickets the terminal with signs that say "Don't contribute to the Hare Krishnas." His grandson, David, joined the Krishnas several years ago and Mr. Yanoff's efforts to find him heve failed.

"We have to hit the Krishnas in the pocketbook," Mr. Yanoff said. "So what we do is step up to people and say, 'do you know who they are?". Generally, the person says, 'no' and usually that's enough."

Uttalma Sloka, the president of the Krishna temple in the Chicago area, said, "We have nothing to hide Morris Yanoff has a screwed-up conception of what we are."

He said that the solicitations, the amount of which he declined to dis-close, go to support the temple, where some 50 Krishnas live, and to buy

He cootends the Krishnas have "nothing extensive" by way of training on seeking money. "It's brief," he said. "I don't think they made a deal," he said. "and if they did, I don't think the LO.C. will approve it."

He said the rights must be sold to a bona fide broadcasting organization.
"They can't be a supplier of television programs. They must have stations and networks."

If there was a deal, Mr. Arledge said. and if the I.O.C. does approve it, "God

Robert J. Wussler, president of CBS, said yesterday in New York: "I doo't think the story is over. I think it will go on for weeks."

Backers Not Revealed

Satra refused to say whom it represented in the negotiations for the television rights. But the spokesman said Satra's two backers were "both listed on the New York Stock Exchange and both were involved in entertainment and hroadcast-

volved in entertainment and hroadcasting."

A Satra representative in Moscow said his company had signed a protocol with the Soviet organizing committee after both sides had agreed on "a mutually acceptable price." Representing Satra in Moscow were Satra's president for subsidiaries, John Kapstein, and its Moscow representative, Carl M. Longley.

Ara Oztemel, chairman of Satra's board, is scheduled to disclose details of the deal an New York today.

Merryle S. Rukeyser, public-relations executive of NBC, said his oetwork did not yet have anything to say. "We haven't received any notification from anyone." he said. "We will wait for the Russians and then determine our course of action."

Concern Over Asking Price

According to reports on the oegotia-tions, the allegations of the three net-works were somewhat surprising by the appearance of Satre at the Moscow bargaining table. The American executives were also concerned over the high price the Russians were asking for the exclusive television rights.

games edequately.

A Satra official there responded that "the only people in the United States who feel that the networks are the only ones who can do it are the three networks

who can do at are the interest leaves in themselves."

The Satra Corporation, with offices at 475 Park Avenue South, has been in business in Manhattan for at least 25 years. It has traded in Soviet-and Americanmade movies and vehicles such as Soviet-made cars, trucks and tractors.

made cars, trucks and tractors.

Each network's delegation arrived in Moscow eager to garner the exclusive rights. William S. Paiey, chairman of CBS, himself had previously visited the Soviet capital in behalf of his network. NBC dispatched a large delegation of executives, and ABC, which had exclusively hroadcast the games since 1968, also dispatched its top network and sports-programming officials.

gramming officials.

The withdrawal of the networks from the Moscow negotiations last weekend left Satra to deal with the Soviet organizers. The Associated Press reported the Soviet Union was known to have been unset by the departure of the American network executives.
